Milton Women Close Contest to Sign as Voters

Eighty Milton women who failed of registration because the legal time for registering expired before their turn in the line came will not be permitted to take part in the hot school committee contest of Milton on Monday. Judge DeCourcy of the Supreme Court today dismissed the petition of Maude D. Kirkland and other Milton women for an order to compel Clarence Bearce and the other Milton registrars to hold another registration of voters before the election.

In the courtroom it was related how one woman who had dipped the registering pen in the ink was prevented from putting down her name because of the striking of the clock at 10, the hour when registering closed. Bang went the official registration book in the very face of the would-be voter it was stated, to which Judge DeCourcy said:

"I do not think the incident of the woman with the pen poised is material to the issue, but it indicates that the registrars had their eyes pretty sharp on the clock."

In the court room it was brought out that there were only three registrars present, that only one set of books were used,

NO MONEY TRUST, SAYS HIGGINSON

Major Henry L. Higginson of Lee, Higginson & Company, the Boston bankers, and one of the six financial houses in the land particularly hit in the majority report of the Pujo committee on the "money trust" investigation, said today:

"Pujo is a contemptible cuss."

The Iraie banker, in a vigorous interview on the Pujo report, also made statements like these:

"There is no money trust—Pujo knows it does not exist—Pujo does not want any facts—all he wanted was news—I am in business to make interest for my investors—the term 'Money Trust' does not mean anything—it does not exist."

William Endicott, Jr., of Kidder, Peabody & Co., the other of the two Boston banking houses named in the Pujo report as "the most active agents in bringing about the concentration of money and credit," was asked today what a "Money Trust" is, within the meaning of the report. He replied:

Cannot Be a Money Trust.

"You got me. I cannot tell you that. There is no such thing. I do not know of any money trust. Ask them. Maybe they can tell you. I can't."

Major Higginson's statement on the Pujo report was as follows:

"There is no money trust. There cannot be a money trust. The term has never been defined, and cannot be defined. I do not know what it means. Pujo does not know what it means. It does not mean anything. It does not exist. Pujo know it does not exist.

"Take the case of the man who buys flour for profit. That flour is his own. He can sell it if he wants to. He may refuse to sell it, and insist on keeping it. He paid for it. It is his. Or, take the case of a shoe man. He bought shoes for profit. He paid for those shoes. Those shoes are his. He may sell those shoes, or he may keep them, as he sees fit. They are under his complete control, and no one can take them from him. Or take the case of shirts, and the right of the man in possession are the same.

"Is That a Trust."

"Not so with money. You deposit your money with Mr. Smith or Mr. Morgan, or

2 GARMENT STRIKERS ARRESTED

Two arrests marked the progress of the garment workers' strike today. Both were made in front of No. 340 Washington street during a disturbance. The first was that of Annabale Marcelli, fifty-three. He was taken into custody by Patrolman Hamilton of the Court square station and booked on the charge of assault and battery upon a garment worker named Palombo, residing in Chelsea, who refused to join the strike. Palombo came to his place of employment in a taxicab and the police say that he was hit in the face several times by Marcelli as he stepped from the vehicle.

While Marcelli was being taken away Sergeant Laffey arrested Giovanni Corrigelo, charged with disturbing the peace.

300 Girl Pickets.

Three hundred young women and girls served as pickets in the strike district today. The officials of the union asserted that 500 persons who refused to come out yesterday joined the strikers' ranks today. It was also said that 3,000 skirt and cloak makers would be called out on strike as well, following Monday night, unless the present controversy was settled before that time.

Measures were taken today to enlist the interest of the members of the Women's Trade Union League. This organization will meet at No. 7 Warrenton street, tomorrow afternoon, to take action. The officers of the league are: Professor Emily Balch of Wellesley College, president; Mrs William C. Ripley, wife of Professor Ripley of Harvard, vice-president; Miss Mabelle Gillispie, a Radcliffe graduate, secretary.

Besides many women, stalwart young men were put on guard at all the meeting places of the strikers today to keep watch for persons suspected of taking advantage of the situation to ply the vocation of white slavers. Two women and a man who visited strike headquarters at No. 730 Washington street last night, exhibiting sums of money among the strikers and flashing diamond rings and trinkets, caused the guards to be placed today. It is said that a large number of girls were approached by the trio, who offered to provide them with clothing, food and shelter until the strike was settled.

In consequence of all this every person, whether man or woman, calling at the meeting places of the strikers today, had to be identified before they were admitted.

Labor Is Aroused.

Referring to the attempt of alleged "white slavers" to lure away girl strikers, James T. Moriarty, president of the Boston Central Labor Union, said:

Organized labor in this city will go the limit to protect the girl strikers from the unscrupulous agents of the white slave traffic, whose attempt to capture some of the garment strikers was blocked through a fortunate chance yesterday.

As president of the Central Labor Union, I shall see to it that the police are kept informed of the situation, and if necessary, I shall demand that wholesale arrests of these human vultures shall be made for the protection of our girl trade unionists.

No more vicious thing ever was attempted than that of the white slave agents at the meeting of strikers yesterday. Two women, with a male companion, circulated among the crowd of girl strikers to ply their calling. Diamonds and rolls of money were exhibited, all to no purpose, however.

It seems very strange that such things could happen in Boston. Our police might well extend the same protection to these girls as has been given to strike breakers and other non-trade unionists in many other instances since this trouble started.

The United Garment Workers' Union for men's clothing today threw a large number of [illegible] on Washington and Hawley streets, where strike-breakers are alleged to have been at work.

First New Nickels Arrive in Boston; Collectors Get All

Boston's first allotment of the new five cent pieces arrived today and were enthusiastically greeted by collectors, who secured the entire lot of 100,000 within the three hours that the United States Sub Treasury kept its windows open.

So eager were seekers after the new coin, that at 6 o'clock a line of 100 people had formed outside the windows of the treasury, and at 9 o'clock, when the windows opened, several hundred people were in line.

A majority of the people wanted one or two dollars' worth of the nickles, but banks, business houses, and other firms asked for heavier allotments. They were rolled in packages of $5, for convenience, but although each man or woman was allowed to take away as many as they cared to exchange, the individual demands were not large enough to show that anyone was trying to get a corner on the supply.

The new coin is handsomer than the old. The "V" has disappeared. Instead is the model of a standing bison, the words "United States of America, E Pluribus Unum," and "Five Cents." On the other side, the head of the Goddess of Liberty is replaced by the head of an Indian, the word Liberty above and the date, 1913 below.

HOSPITAL NURSE RESCUES BOY FROM CHARLES RIVER

Grover S. Bowen, a nurse at the Stillman Infirmary at Cambridge, made a daring rescue today of six-year-old Edward Olson, son of Silas Olson of No. 14 Maynard place, from the Charles River. Bowen plunged into the icy water and with great difficulty brought young Olson ashore.

The Olson boy was playing on the ice when it broke beneath him. His cries were heard by Bowen in the infirmary, who ran out on the ice, which broke under him. Bowen succeeded in catching hold of the Olson boy and started toward the bank. Two linemen of the Cambridge Electric Light Company who were passing waded into the water with a ladder, with which they pulled Bowen and the boy ashore.

The boy was treated in the infirmary, and suffered no ill-effects from his icy bath.

FITZGERALD WIRES APPOINTMENTS TO NEW PARK BOARD

Under telegraphic instructions from Mayor Fitzgerald, who is at Palm Beach, Fla., his confidential secretary, "Colonel" Dick Field today filed with the civil service commission the names of the Mayor's appointees as commissioners of the new Department of Parks and Recreations.

They are Superintendent D. Henry Sullivan of the public grounds department, and Park Commissioners Robert S. Peabody and Daniel H. Coakley. The papers have been in the safe in the Mayor's office for a fortnight.

HOUSE PASSES THE WEBB LIQUOR BILL OVER VETO

WASHINGTON, March 1.—The House today, by a large margin, passed the Webb Interstate Liquor bill over the President's veto. The action of the House makes the bill a law, as the Senate has already passed the measure over the veto.

The vote on the Webb bill was 244 to 95, and when the result was announced by Speaker Clark, the House burst forth in a great volume of applause, in which the crowded galleries joined.

DECLARE QUINCY MAN MUST PROVE CHARGE OR OFFER AN APOLOGY

Senator McDevitt Refuses to Answer Query That "Bribe" Silence Is to Protect Friend

Q.—Is it not a fact that you told several Quincy men a few days ago, that you know very well who was the man that offered you the bribe, but that he is a good fellow and a friend of yours, and therefore you do not want to get him into trouble! A.—I warn you not to dare say that about me.

Q.—Would you say you did not say that? A.—I do not care to answer that.

—From interview between Senator McDevitt and Boston AMERICAN reporter taken stenographically.

Feeling against the policy of silence by Senator John J. McDevitt of Quincy in connection with the bribe offer of $300 is growing.

There is every reason to believe that when the Legislature meets Monday the climax of this affair will be reached quickly, and that Speaker Cushing will insist that—

McDevitt make good and name the man said to have offered him a bribe or apologize.

In spite of McDevitt's refusal to commit himself in any way, the impression grows that the Quincy man is withholding the name of the man in the bribery offer, in order to protect a friend.

REFUSES TO ANSWER QUESTION.

He has refused to answer a question to this effect and has "dared" the AMERICAN to say this about him.

McDevitt, who charged in an address at Wollaston a Representative offered him a bribe of $300, has promised to appear on Monday before the Joint Rules Committee of the Legislature and make a further statement. So far, after repeated questioning, he has refused to name the man he said tried to bribe him, or explain his statement he "could leave the Senate $200,000 richer at the end of the year if he wished."

President Greenwood of the Senate said today:

Senator McDevitt has agreed to make some statement, the nature of which we cannot discuss. It has not even been definitely decided upon by the Senator himself.

He is to have Sunday to think it over. If he should make a statement to the effect that he had made a mistake or was in error and submitted an apology, it might help the situation. That, however, is for the full committee to pass on.

"Counselled to Keep Silent."

"I am counselled to be silent," Senator McDevitt told an AMERICAN reporter in an interview taken stenographically. The reporter asked why he could not tell the people of Massachusetts through the press the full details of his charges of attempted bribery, but McDevitt evaded that question, as he did many others, and replied in this instance:

"You go take a feather and tickle yourself, will you?"

"I deny nothing," was another reply made by the Senator. He refused, as he has for days, to give names or details.

WOMAN HIT BY LIGHTNING IN STORM TODAY

A woman, either the wife or sister of Louis Enholm, No. 43 Pleasant street, Milton, was struck down, burned about the head and made unconscious by a bolt of lightning that hit the house during a terrific thunder-storm this afternoon.

The lightning followed the chimney into the Enholm cellar, overturning chairs, tables and brica-brac, and starting a fire.

The woman was brought back to consciousness at a neighbor's house. Her hair was singed.

Meanwhile the Milton fire department had arrived and put out the blaze in the Enholm house.

The electrical storm was as severe as any that has passed over that town in the Summer time. Houses having telephone lines were affected by the shock of the lightning as it hit the wires.

FAVOR EXETER AT BIG ANNUAL SCHOOL MEET

MECHANICS HALL, March 1.—Thousands of schoolboy athletic followers from all corners of New England wended their way through torrents of rain today to witness the twenty-fourth annual indoor schoolboy games held under the auspices of the Boston Athletic Association.

Exeter, as in past years, ruled the favorite, although the class of athletes from Worcester Academy and Powder-Point School promised them a run for the honors.

Exeter was well represented on the cheering line. Long before the openingevent was run off the war whoops of the New Hampshire lads could be heard singing the praises of their representatives.

Although no records were expected to be broken, still the class of athletes indicated that every race would be a close one.

Charley Kee, the sorrel-top youngster from Powder Point, and favorite in the forty-yard dash, was out early and worked as though he meant business.

SAVED MORGAN, SENSELESS ALL NIGHT ON NILE

By CAMILIO CIANFARRA.

CAIRO, Egypt, March 1.—J. Pierpont Morgan owes his life to Dr. Tribe's presences on the financier's trip up the Nile, and to the prompt and efficient treatment the doctor gave when Mr. Morgan was seized with a severe and most threatening attack of spasmodic cramps in his stomach.

As it was, Mr. Morgan fainted repeatedly while the attack lasted and after it was unconscious for several hours, so the AMERICA'S commissioner is informed by an indubitable authority. After the first symptoms that Mr. Morgan was suffering from an affection of the stomach appeared while he was on the steamship Adriatic, Mr. Morgan's relatives tried to dissuade him from going up the Nile.

He swept aside their arguments and objections, for he was particularly anxious to make a trip on the Nile pleasure boat he had built. It was decided then that Dr. Tribe should accompany him and the party, ostensibly to treat a slight affection of the ear, which troubled Mr. Morgan's niece, but really to watch Mr. Morgan, who complained of his stomach frequently.

On February 9, while Mr. Morgan was inspecting the excavations at Thebes, of which he is paying the cost, he was seized suddenly with spasmodic cramps in his stomach, which caused him to faint several times. He was carried aboard his boat. There Dr. Tribe massaged him and ministered to him in every way, but he did not regain his senses until the next day.

As the cramps did not cease, Mr. Morgan's relatives decided to proceed with him to Europe on the fast mail boat leaving here. But on the day of sailing his patient was so weak that Dr. Tribe changed his plan and Mr. Morgan remained here.

This is his last visit to Egypt, in all probability. According to Professor Lythgoe, who is superintending the excavations on the American archaeological concession, Mr. Morgan's chief object in coming to Egypt this year was to keep up the work for the next three years and, after a thorough personal investigation, to take the necessary steps to insure the continuation of the work.

Enoch Williams of Germany is one of the many who have wired to Mr. Morgan asking about his health.

"CASCARETS" BEST BOWEL CLEANSER

No Biliousness, Headache, Sick, Sour Stomach, Coated Tongue or Constipation.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels. This causes your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a chicken coop. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret tonight will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then to keep their stomach, liver and bowels regulated, and never have a miserable moment. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

'BOUND TO WIN,' STRIKERS TELL ANGELA MORGAN

By ANGELA MORGAN.

"We're bound to win! If the girls will just stand solidly together in this great strike there can be but one outcome. You might as well try to keep back the ocean with a spoon as to attempt to dam this flood of protest, this united cry for a living wage."

Cheered by 6,000 girls and women, Miss Josephine Casey of New York, general organizer of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, took charge of the huge throngs that packed two union halls and urged the strikers to stand firm in their demands.

Torrent of Protest.

It was indeed a torrent of protest represented by the huge gathering of girls and women; a torrent that poured through the corridors and up the stairways and overflowed all rooms and ante-rooms, at the strike headquarters on Washington street, so that the men's headquarters next door had to be called upon to accommodate the deluge.

As I pushed my way through the mass of workers I realized that the real strike, the irresistible strike so long predicted, was on at last. Truly it was a thrilling spectacle. Girls and women of every nationality, it seemed —Syrian, Italian, Portuguese, Jews, Russians, American and others—thronged to a common centre, united by one common urge.

"We've got to live. We've got to have enough to eat and wear. We're working our hearts out and we can't earn enough to live!"

This was the general cry, the heartcry and the soul cry of these hard-pressed, struggling workers, some of them employed by the mile difference others past middle age—all of them fighting against the one dread enemy, starvation wages.

Mother Slaves for Children.

Mothers of families, whose faces were marked with years of toil, stood side by side with girls not more than fourteen and fifteen years old. These little girls told of long hours in close shops, where they toiled from the time the older women worked, nine hours each day, for only a pittance.

I looked at the mothers and asked why it was they should be working.

"To keep our children at school," they said. "To keep them out of the sweatshops. They shall not slave as we have slaved, and as those girls are slaving."

I looked at the little girls and asked why they were working. Had they no one to support them? Why were their fathers not at work? Why should they stop school to toil in garment shops?

"Because," one of them gravely told me, "our fathers earn enough. They do work, but they are not paid enough, so we have to help keep the family going."

The child was fourteen years old. She has worked for several months, practically since she was thirteen. Her family absolutely requires the help she gives, so she and her friends declare.

In this column I have told from time to time of the tasks done by girls and women garment workers, of their hours, their hardships, their futile struggle to make a living wage. Today I shall tell of a new order of garment worker—those who have just gone on strike, to join the others about which I have written.

Tells Who Strikers Are.

These present strikers work only on ladies' and children's garments. They are waist makers, skirt makers and makers of house dresses and the like. Some of the girls are employed in shops that turn out delicate models of silk and chiffon. Others, where only the cheaper grades are manufactured—out of cotton materials, mostly.

You light-hearted, unthinking girls and women, who boast of the "beautiful bargains" you get, do you realize that those bargains are bought at the price of such human sacrifice as this? When you don your "wonderfully cheap" chiffon waist, or your dainty house dress, purchased at a figure so marvelously low, do you know that some poor girl has to suffer that you may enjoy?

How much do you suppose a girl gets for turning out those cheap waists? TWENTY-FIVE CENTS a DOZEN! Think of it. A girl will sit at a machine and stitch one dozen waists, all but the finishing and pressing in the sleeves, and receive for that labor only twenty-five cents for the lot.

And about the house dresses. Girls work at machines, making the skirts of these dresses separately. A girl will make these skirts complete, on the machine. How much does she receive? Twenty-five cents per dozen! You can see how many dozen she must make before she earns enough to pay for room and board and all the other things human beings must have to live.

Miracle How They Live.

Some of the workers receive a weekly wage. These get $5 and sometimes $6 for their labor, working nine hours a day.

"It is a miracle how they live at all," said Miss Casey, as one by one the girls recited the facts of their working day.

Mrs. W. Z. Ripley, wife of the Harvard professor of economics, was with Miss Casey, cheering and helping the striking women in their fight. She declared that the sacrifices made by these underpaid workers are bitter to believe, and that the public has little conception what the life of a woman sweatshop worker is.

From room to room and group to group Mrs. Ripley and Miss Casey went, encouraging the strikers, delivering rousing rallying cries to the one cause.

"We have won in New York!" cried the intrepid organizer, facing the cheering girls. "We have won in New York and if you girls will just stick together we shall win here in Boston. That's what it means and that's all it means—sticking together for one huge body.

Here are the demands of the strikers:

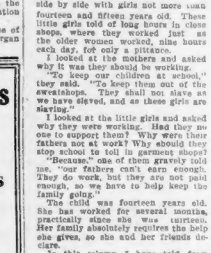
What Strikers Demand.

A forty-nine hour week.
Minimum $6 wage.
Fifteen per cent. wage increase.
Double pay for overtime.
Union workers only.
No "week" and "piece" work together.
Sanitary conditions.
No factory workers under sixteen.
Equal distribution of work in dull season.
No individual agreements between manufacturer and employe.
No wage deposits.
Union inspection of shops.
Six thousand girls and women out on strike! It means a determined fight. It means a fight for food and clothing and shelter and air and clean shops in which to work. It means that the fathers shall be paid enough so the children need not add their frail shoulders to the wheel.

Plans are under way for meetings at which aid will be given to sustain the striking garment workers. Boston women interested in the movement are expected to come forward now at this crisis with substantial assistance.

Other prominent social workers are on their way to Boston to stand by the strikers. Miss Gertrude Barnum of Chicago is expected here and Miss Rose Schneider, "the angel of the East Side" in New York, is looked for today.

Miss Casey and Mrs. Ripley declare that in the solidarity of this present strike there is every encouragement for speedy adjustment of the difficulties and if the strikers still hold out steadfastly they are bound to win their demands.



YOUR LUNGS

ARE THEY WEAK OR PAINFUL?
Do your lungs ever bleed?

'CONTEMPTIBLE CUSS, PUJO,' SAYS MAJ. HIGGINSON

with any other banker. That money is not his. They make a good impression on you, and you entrust them with your funds. They do not own that money. You have a right to withdraw that money whenever you begin to lose confidence in their methods. Is that a trust?

"Have I asked you to deposit your money with me? Or have I tried to deprive you of your money after you wanted it back? You know you can get your money back whenever you want it. You look good to me, you are of good report. You satisfy me that your credit is good; that money is safe in your hands, and I leave my funds with you. You have been in business long, you have treated your customers well, other people have expressed their satisfaction with your methods, and I will have the same confidence in you as my neighbor.

"Is that a trust? Does that deprive you of any right to deposit money anywhere else? Does that deprive me of the right to deprive you of my money whenever I want it back? Was any one threated? You see the distinction. The people behind here, of those who told me that you said that that man was a good fellow and your friend; that you well know who it was, and that you do not care to get him into trouble. A—I do not remember saying any such a thing.

Q.—The result is you do not care whether or not the people behind here, of you made up that story out of nothing, for the purpose of causing your audience to admire your extraordinary honesty, and made them believe that you refused real money when you had a hance to get it? A.—I do not care what the people will decide, so long as my constituents still have me as my character. I gave you a long enough interview; and all I want is that you do not misquote me. You understand my position.

The very best friend the Senator admits of having, and to whom he admits success in life, was present at this interview, and that gentleman said:

Now, Duke, you know you said to us that you know who the fellow was, and that he is a friend and a good fellow, and that you do not want to get him into trouble. You said, that only some two nights ago.

"My Record Must Speak."

Q. (by reporter)— You were with him all last night, were you not?

A. (by McDevitt)—I did not say that.

Q.—Will you say you were not?

A.— You are kidding me.

Q.—Do you absolutely refuse to give either details or evidence to back up that terrible charge upon the premises of the Capitol? A.—My record must speak for itself.

Q.—Did you when you are studying law at the Boston University Law School? A.—Yes; have been about a year.

Q.—Was there one answer that you gave here now that is consistent with the education they give you there? A.—You are right on the direct questions.

SAY M'DEVITT MUST TELL OF SENATE BRIBE

McDevitt is known among his constituents as "Duke, the Stonecutter." He was seen in Quincy by an AMERICAN reporter.

McDevitt's Replies.

The questions and answers were as follows:

Q.—Was that lobbyist a representative of the Elevated Railroad interests? A.—No use of pumping me; I will not answer.

Q.—Would you say he was not an Elevated Railroad representative?

A.—The same answer. I will not answer, and I do not want to be misquoted.

A.—Was he r member of the Legislature? A.—I cannot tell you that.

Q.—You have known him for a good many years, have you not? A.—You are doing your duty all right, but you simply cannot pump me.

Q.—Was he representing Boston Telephone Company interests? A.—I cannot answer that.

Q.—Are you afraid to antagonize the gentleman, or those behind him? A.—That is not my reason. I am counseled to be silent.

Q.—Who is your counselor to keep silent against a man who has tried to corrupt a member of the General Court of Massachusetts? A.—I am my counselor, myself. I never had any other.

Q.—Then you renounce Senator John H. Mack also. A.—He only gave me advice. He is not my lawyer. That is my interest.

Q.—Were you ever licensed, anywhere, to be a lawyer? A.—Yes.

Q.—What bill was contemplated, when that bribe was offered you? A. I cannot tell you that.

Q.—Why can you not tell the people of Massachusetts that, through the press? A.—You go take a leather and buckle yourself, will you?

Q.—That is quite a dignified example of language for a Senator of Massachusetts to use, is it not? A.—Well, I only said that in fun. I do not want to be misquoted.

"I Did Not Deny Anything."

Q.—Then you deny that this man was either a telephone interest or an Elevated interest lobbyist? A.—I did not deny anything.

Q.—You admit then that he was one of the two? A.—I do not admit it, I tell you.

Q.—Was that gentleman a licentiate at law? A.—I do not know what that is.

Q.—A lawyer? A.—I cannot answer. I will not answer, that is all.

Q.—As a matter of fact, were you not with the man who offered you that bribe not later than last night? A.—That is a very foolish question to ask.

Q.—Thanks. You did not go to your residence all last night? A.—That is my business.

Q.—You deny that you were with him? A.—I deny nothing. I did not say anything. Now, do not misquote me.

Q.—Is it not true that as a matter of fact no one offered or talked bribery to you, and that you made that story up, in order to show to your constituents how awfully good you are, in refusing such a great temptation as a bribe of $3000? A.—Even accord is something I am proud of, I think. It is my record.

Q.—Do you want people to understand that when, by your mere assertion, you put a cloud upon the State House, your word ought to be taken in the place of law, and no further question should be asked, or investigation made? A.—I did not say that.

Q.—Then, what do you mean by your record? A.—I mean that as long as my constituents are satisfied with me, that is all I care for, and they are.

Q.—Does that answer any of the questions put to you? A.—It is not intended to answer anything.

Q.—Is it not a fact that you told several Quincy men a few days ago, that you know very well who was the man that offered you the bribe, but that he is a good fellow and a friend of yours, and therefore you do not want to get him into trouble? A.—I warn you not to dare say that about me.

Q.—You admit that to be true, but warn us not to say it to the public. A.—I never said that.

Q.—If I brought your friends face to face with you, and they would say you said it—one of those friends being the gentleman to whom you owe your position as Senator today, would you call them liars? A.—I do not use such language.

Q.—Would you say you did not say that? A.—I do not care to answer that.

Q.—What is your object in shielding such a man? A.—I did not say I shielded him.

Q.—Will you come with me, or do you promise to stay here two minutes longer, and within that time I will have at least one of your friends here, of those who told me that you said that that man was a good fellow and your friend; that you well know who it was, and that you do not care to get him into trouble A.—I do not remember saying any such a thing.

Q.—The result is you do not care whether or not the people behind here, of you made up that story out of nothing, for the purpose of causing your audience to admire your extraordinary honesty, and made them believe that you refused real money when you had a hance to get it? A.—I do not care what the people will decide, so long as my constituents still have me as my character. I gave you a long enough interview; and all I want is that you do not misquote me. You understand my position.

The very best friend the Senator admits of having, and to whom he admits success in life, was present at this interview, and that gentleman said:

Now, Duke, you know you said to us that you know who the fellow was, and that he is a friend and a good fellow, and that you do not want to get him into trouble. You said, that only some two nights ago.

"My Record Must Speak."

Q. (by reporter)— You were with him all last night, were you not?

A. (by McDevitt)—I did not say that.

Q.—Will you say you were not?

A.— You are kidding me.

Q.—Do you absolutely refuse to give either details or evidence to

DEVENEY FORGERY CASE IS SETTLED

District Attorney Pelletier today noted passed the case of Matthew J. DeViney, the Boston advertising man indicted by the Suffolk County Grand Jury on a charge of forgery and larceny by raising a check from $4 to $4,000. It is learned that the decision by the District Attorney was reached after DeViney paid back $3,000 to Gardner F. Greene, Robert B. Greene and Wilson J. Farrington, his business partners, upon whom, it is alleged, he Viney raised the check. He also surrendered his stock, $1,400 in the concern, and resigned as president.

APPEAL JAIL SENTENCE IN BROOKLINE ROW

Leonard H. Spaulding, a wealthy shoe manufacturer of Lowell, residing at No. 23 Everett avenue, Winchester, and his chauffeur, William A. Grant, were today found guilty of assault on Evan S. Cameron at his home, No. 49 St. Marys street, Brookline, and were sentenced to the House of Correction for six months.

They appealed and were released under $1,000 bail each, to appear again in Dedham on Monday, in the Norfolk Superior Court.

The alleged assault took place on January 23, when Cameron, going home in the morning, met Spaulding and his chauffeur coming down the stairs of the apartment house in Brookline. It is alleged that Spaulding refused to allow Cameron to pass, and after an argument assaulted him. Getting the worst of the argument, Spaulding's negro chauffeur is said to have stepped in with a knife or sharp instrument, and inflicted wounds on Cameron.

Two weeks ago Cameron filed a civil suit for $25,000 on an action of tort against Spaulding. Grant had been found guilty at a previous hearing and his case had been continued for sentence until the case against Spaulding has been settled.

This Wife and Mother

Wishes to Tell You FREE How She Stopped Her Husband's Drinking

By All Means Write to Her and Learn How She Did It.

For over 20 years James Anderson of 286 Elm Ave., Hillburn, N. Y., was a hard drinker. His condition became a hopeless one, but 10 years ago his wife, in their own little home, gave him a simple remedy which, much to her delight, stopped his drinking entirely.

No man ever knew that the remedy was responsible for this happy result, she has since tried it on her brother and several of her neighbors. It was successful in every case. None of them has touched a drop of intoxicating liquor since.

She now wishes everyone who has drunkenness in their homes to try this simple remedy, for she feels sure that it will do as much for others as it has for her. It can be given secretly if desired, and without cost she will gladly and willingly tell you what it is. All you have to do is write her a letter telling her how she cured her husband of drinking and she will reply by return mail in a sealed envelope. As she has nothing to sell, do not send her money. Simply send a letter with your address to Mrs. Margaret Anderson at the address given above, taking care to write your name and full address plainly. (We earnestly advise every one of our readers who wishes to cure a dear one of drunkenness to write to this lady to-day. She offer us a sincere one.)

HIKERS AT ODDS AGAIN OVER NOTE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The hiking suffragettes remained late in bed today, nursing their gradually decreasing physical aches and pains, as well as their increasing feeling of indignation toward the Washington suffragettes in general and Miss Alice Paul, member of the congressional suffrage committee, in particular.

It developed today that the suffrage message to President-elect Wilson which was to have been for only Wilson's eyes, had been permitted in some way, while in the care of Miss Paul, to become public. Miss Paul said the letter was unsealed. "General" Jones insists the letter was sealed.

The lukewarm welcome given the hikers yesterday by the local suffragettes, added to Miss Paul's act in taking the suffrage message from their leader, has made the hikers indignant.

Some of them refused to attend to luncheon given yesterday by the Washington suffragettes, and several more announced today that they would not attend the banquet tonight.

A further rupture may take place if "General" Jones is not granted her request that the war correspondent from each paper join the hikers from New York be given positions in the parade.

"If the newspaper people are not permitted to march we won't march," said the "General."

"But we have no place in the parade for the newspaper people," the Congressional Committee told the hikers' commander.

"Their place is with us," said the "General."

The Congressional Committee in charge of the parade was to meet later in the day and decide upon the "General's" ultimatum.

Up to noon the Wilson letter had not been returned to "General" Jones, but it was explained to her by the local suffragettes that "it will be very shortly."

ANTI-SUFFRAGISTS TO DINE WEDNESDAY

A unique entertainment has been planned by prominent Boston women interested in Anti-Suffrage work. Mesdames William Lowell Putnam, Charles H. Fiske, Jr., Robert S. Bradley, Herbert Lyman, W. W. Vaughan, George Agassiz, Thomas Allen, Henry D. Tudor, Henry M. Whitney, Brooks Adams and Miss Sarah Crocker have issued invitations for dinners to be held simultaneously Wednesday evening. After the dinners each hostess, accompanied by all of her guests, will go to the home of Mrs. William Amory Wadsworth, No. 45 Commonwealth ave., where at 10 o'clock, they will be addressed by Frederick P. Fish on "Women Do Not Want Votes."

MARCHING SUFFRAGETTES entering Washington yesterday at the end of 250-mile hike from New York to the Capital to present "Votes for Women" message to President Wilson.

Hikers "Noisy and Clamorous," Declares Gibbons

BALTIMORE, Md., March 1.—"Noisy, clamorous and spectacular" were the terms used by Cardinal Gibbons in describing the recent visit of the hiking suffragists to this city. He was speaking before the woman's auxiliary of the St. Raphael Institute here when the annual meeting was in progress. He said:

"I wish to say a few words of unstinted praise in behalf of the noble and modest women who have devoted their lives to the sisterhood and the service and uplift of the poor.

"Here we have true women; women who know their place. Then look at the other picture in contrast. On one hand we see good accomplished in a quiet, modest way. On the other, we see the noisy, clamorous and spectacular way of other women, and as an example of this I point to the hikers who were among you a few days ago."

When seen at his home the Cardinal added that he had been much annoyed by the reports spread about the country that in receiving hikers he had indorsed their cause.

"I am not in favor of suffrage now, nor was I when I received the hikers," said the prelate. "I did not say on any occasion that they reminded me of Joan of Arc nor did I compare their exercises with that of the noble women of France."

"Do you think the hiking methods have aided their cause of women suffrage?' the Cardinal was asked.

"Oh, I am sure it has not," replied the Cardinal, but refused to say anything more or to listen to further questions.

Time for Women to End Subjugation, Says Poet Noyes

"Mrs. Noyes is even a more ardent suffragist than I, but don't imagine she would throw a brick through a window," Alfred Noyes, the English poet, who is a guest at the home of Mrs. Thomas Bailey Aldrich, widow of the poet, confided to a reporter today. He continued:

We, neither of us, believe in militant tactics. I think the methods of the English leaders have put back their cause in England, and done it immense harm all over the world. The success of the movement in some of your States proves that the American method of persuasion is far superior to ours.

Women have been literally in subjection all over the world for centuries, and now it is their turn to stand on their own feet.

Tomorrow Mr. and Mrs. Noyes leave for New York.

Bay State Women in Capital for Inaugural March

WASHINGTON, March 1.—The Massachusetts delegation, which will be in the Progressive division of the inaugural parade, reached here today. BOSTON PEOPLE SEEK CURE BY FRIEDMANN

Many Boston and New England people are expected to be in the long line in front of Dr. Friedrich Franz Friedmann's office in New York Monday morning to receive its wonderful tuberculosis cure.

Thousands of persons have written, telegraphed or visited Dr. Friedmann personally, asking to be treated with the serum, for which Charles E. Finley, President of the Aetna National Bank of New York, is reported to have offered a million dollars, if it is proven effective.

On Monday morning Dr. Friedmann will give his first public demonstration of the wonderful new cure for the dread white plague.

From Boston, New England, and from all over the country, there started today a stream of sick, suffering humanity towards New York.

To treat a thousand a day is the aim of Dr. Friedmann. He has engaged a score of secretaries and attendants, who will assist him in caring for the sick as they come to his doors, at the northeast corner of Fifth avenue and Thirty-third streets.

Dr. Friedmann's rule Monday is to be "First come, first served." There will be no discrimination. Rich and poor will be treated alike. Each one will be asked relative to his financial status and charged accordingly. Those who have no money will not be turned away. They will be treated with the priceless serum just the same as their more fortunate brothers with a bank account.

The patients will be examined by American doctors. They will see that they are really affected with tuberculosis, that there may be no fraud.

But Dr. Friedmann's first patient will be Rev. Lee Paradis, son-in-law of Charles E. Finley, the American millionaire who offered the million if the cure proves effective.

The German savant will be the guest of the banker at Great Neck tomorrow evening and will then treat young Paradis.

MEXICO WARNED BY U. S. TO STOP EXECUTIONS

MEXICO CITY, March 1.—A warning has been served upon the Mexican government by the United States, that the wholesale execution of anti-government leaders will not be tolerated.

The warning, which was friendly in tone and couched in diplomatic language, made plain the principle of the State department, that the United States does not wish to interfere in the affairs of another nation. At the same time, however, it pointed out that the laws of humanity must be obeyed no matter how serious the stress of conditions confronting a government.

The note was handed to Senor de la Barra, Mexico's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, by United States Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson.

CASSIDY DEMANDS NEW LAW TO STOP DECEIT BY DISHONEST MEAT MEN

Mr. Cassidy today gives further facts as to the making of sausages containing cereal and coloring matter. A bill to stop this practice is now before the legislative Committee on Public Health, following a hearing held Thursday. Mr. Cassidy tells of some of the trade preparations used in making the sausage, and the directions given butchers for their use.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

The Joint Committee on Public Health at a recent hearing devoted some time to a consideration of a bill I had introduced to prevent the use of coloring matter of cereals in sausage.

The opponents of the bill were there in force, and at the session declared among other things that sausage could not be made without cereal.

I wish to relate my experience along this line in Philadelphia. When I went into the food department, I was not a food expert, by any means. I had much to learn. But the facts swiftly presented themselves to me.

One day representatives of the Philadelphia Pork Packers' Association came to me. They said:

"Mr. Cassidy, why don't you get after the men who are using cereal in their sausage. That's an adulteration, and we can't compete with them."

I asked: "Isn't cereal a necessary ingredient of sausage as a binder?"

Was Common Practice.

"No, sir," they answered. "Nothing of the kind. We don't use it. The cereal is put in with the meat—then the water is poured on. Five per cent. of the cereal will take up 20 per cent. of water, and when the customer buys sausage a good proportion of the weight of which is water, which has no place there whatever."

I said:

"Are the big sausage makers using cereal in their sausage?"

They replied: "The big Chicago houses are."

I said, "Sit down there and write me a letter to the effect that cereal is not a necessary ingredient of sausage, so that if they dispute the charge, I can call you to testify against them."

They wrote the letter. Then I went out, purchased samples of sausages, found that they contained cereals, and brought cases. The big company I represented pleaded guilty. Following that, a law was passed in Pennsylvania which provides that no sausage may be sold except sausage made of meats and spices. Sausage is adulterated, and may not be sold, if it contains an excessive amount of water; if it contains any cereal or vegetable flour; if it contains any coal tar dye, boric acid, or borates, sulphites, sulphur dioxide, sulphurous acid, or any other substance injurious to health; or if it contains decomposed animal substances.

This act was approved in April of that year. Today, any sausage sold in Pennsylvania containing cereal is sold in violation of the law, and there is very little of it so sold. Yet the trade has suffered no revolution, and the sausage manufacturers are still making money, while the consumer gets what he pays for, and is not defrauded nor deceived.

Need Law in Massachusetts.

If this act has been passed in Pennsylvania and found successful, there can surely be no objection to it—no legitimate objection—in Massachusetts.

I have in my possession a little book called "Secrets of Meat Curing and Sausage Making." It contains a valuable fund of information for a certain type of butchers and sausage-makers. Every bit of information in it is carefully copyrighted. It sells for $2.00.

It tells how to color bologna casings. The receipt read something like this:

"Smear the bologna only long enough to dry it. Then boil it in the coloring fluid. When taken out the bologna will have a half-smoked appearance. In about fifty minutes it will dry out to a fresh smoked appearance."

There are other recipes of a kindred nature, and the book is embellished with the names of patented compounds, powders, solutions and other means of deceiving the customer or of taking short cuts to the finished product.

Let me quote items from the index of this book. It is too large for quotation at any length.

"How to keep bacon for a year."

"Bologna casings colored so strings are not colored."

"How to color bologna casings."

"Bologna coupling with all food laws."

"Freeze-on pickle used for bologna."

"How to utilize bones."

"Why soft meat is best for sausage."

"Bull-Meat-Round Flour-Price list."

"How to color castings."

"Coloring frankfort sausage casings."

"Coloring sausage meat artificially is illegal."

These are simple samples. The book is devoted to teaching butchers how to carry on their trade without violating food laws. Observe the fine distinction indicated in the above titles. The reader is told that coloring sausage MEAT artificially is illegal, but he is also told how to use coloring the sausage CASINGS to a fresh smoke color.

Intent Is to Deceive.

Small difference to the consumer whether the sausage meat is colored or not, if the casing is colored so as to make the sausage appear different from what it really is.

I contend that wherever artificial color is used, it is used for purposes of deception and cheating. I contend that on the part of the Pennsylvania laws, and my experience there, cereals in sausage are not necessary. Therefore the present bill now before the Legislative Committee is a just one, deserving a favorable report and passage. It will work no undue hardship to the honest manufacturer. The dishonest manufacturer deserves no consideration.

JORDAN MARSH CO. ELECTS OFFICERS

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of Jordan Marsh Company, held yesterday, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Eben D. Jordan; Vice-presidents, Walter F. Watters and George W. Mitton, succeeding the late Edward J. Mitton, who was vice-president of the corporation; clerk and treasurer, Maurice Wrigley; directors, Eben D. Jordan, Walter F. Watters, George W. Mitton, Wallace D. Williams, Frank W. Coombs, Richard Mitton and Robert Jordan.

MISS MAUDE A. DEEHAN, principal of Cambridge Trade School for Girls, which is helping to solve the high cost of living problem by giving a 79-cent luncheon for seven.

To show their proficiency in cooking and their ability to cope with the high cost of living, the girls in the cooking classes of the Cambridge Trade School, of which Miss Maude A. Deehan is principal, gave a luncheon to several members of the faculty and the Cambridge school committee. The total cost was seventy-nine cents.

Mrs. Florence Lee Whitman, secretary, who was instrumental in founding the school, was one of the guests, and she was delighted with the success of her plan. Other guests were Superintendent Michael E. Fitzgerald of the Merrill School, Chairman James B. Balliely and John W. Bradley.

Here is the menu:

Tomato soup	7 cents
Baked macaroni and cheese	14 cents
Lamb in mint sauce	19 cents
Bread pudding	18 cents
Hot biscuit and butter	8 cents
Total	79 cents

SLANG CONTEST IS OPEN TO ALL; WIN $5 PRIZE

Mr. McKeen can't escape, even from the slang contest. The wrath of New England folks is upon the New Haven and its president, and now a energetic young Providence woman has coined a new word from the railroad man. She has sent the word to the Slang Contest Editor of the AMERICAN, hoping to win a prize of $5 offered for the best slang word or expression sent into the newspaper.

MELLENIZED is the new word that Miss Florence L. Monroe, No. 7 Pallas street, Providence, suggests. She has "gone one over," as the saying goes, on Charles Sahner himself.

Entries in the contests are coming in thick and fast from every nook and corner of dear old New England. Here's an expression sent by Albert W. Mamary, No. 90 Fourth street, South Boston: "Friends, Romans, Countrymen, another Anthony would speak." Meaning, as you have guessed that someone who likes to hear himself talk is about to be given that privilege.

Referring to book beer, M. Kenny, Dunbar street, Northdale, says: "Don't be too much (bully) drink it down."

"Clam it," is a suggestion from E. P. S., No. 200 Main street, Medford, who was too bashful to send in his or her name.

"That overcoat is some quilt," declares W. L. Ross, No. 259 Summer street, this city.

"Get off the grindstone," is a slang expression mailed by Willis A. Angell, No. 44 Pearl street, Lynn.

Edna Dowd, No. 275 Washington street, Boston, writes: "Don't get ropy, or I'll swing on you."

FRIEDA HEMPEL WEARS ANKLET, OPERA NOVELTY

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

The anklet has come to Boston.

Frieda Hempel, the beautiful coloratura soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, wore one last night. It was gold and was crusted with diamonds, and every time she lifted her skirt the merest trifle they dazzled the eyes of the operatic equivalent of the bubbleshod row.

There was only one. There will be one for the other ankle later when Miss Hempel can afford it. As she gets $1,200 per evening, according to the press agent, that ought to be in a couple of nights.

Miss Hempel is the only rival in the Metropolitan of Terrazini. She was brought over here from Berlin in company with a prodigious reputation. She is a blonde, has blue eyes and dimples, and she is svelte enough to wear a pander gown of crimson with success.

About that pander gown. The opera was "Traviata," and in Boston it is supposed to take place about 1780. The men wear knee breeches and the ladies powdered hair, patches and brocades. Into this atmosphere walked Frieda in her 1913 pander gown, with diamond anklet, and puff, puff went the atmosphere.

Aside from these little things, she was all right. She is a singer of the star type. Occasionally very, very lovely in the middle and lower register, and brilliant, but. Only she is a wee bit weak in the tip-top of the soprano tree. When she tackles an E flat or a D, sometimes she touches it and sometimes she doesn't, giving some.

It is worth making some slight allowance to have a coloratura soprano who is so good to look at, who can get and who has such authority.

It requires no stretch of the imagination to see Hempel installed in Violetta's palace, voted and flattered, the queen of the demi-monde. And when she dies to the music of a severe cough she is not grouped, like some other famous singers, with Hempel sung here more often.

Bernam Blumhart appeared as Alfred Germond and did extremely well in his part, as he always does. Sacchetti, who was substituted for Macnez, the Metropolitan tenor, at the last moment, proved an excellent substitute. The chorus sang. He was worth while, and so was the conducting of Monnzoni.

HUNT 40 BODIES IN OMAHA HOTEL FIRE; ONLY 4 RECOVERED

OMAHA, March 1.—Search was resumed today for the bodies of the victims of the Dewey Hotel fire. It is believed there are forty more bodies in the ruins. The bodies of only four have been recovered. They were Charles Cumalings, a bartender; Mrs. Allen Boomerie, sister of Mrs. T. E. Wilkins, wife of the owner of the hotel; Charles Beverly, employed by the Omaha commission firm, and an unidentified man.

C. F. King Worse, Fear Operation Is Imperative

Bridgewater officials fear that Cardenio F. King will be obliged to undergo a dangerous operation. Many doctors had heretofore expressed the belief his constitution would not stand an operation. His condition was reported as serious, but unchanged today.

Although cheered at the first visit of his wife since the executive council refused to pardon him, the former promoter was in poor spirits today. He is suffering from severe indigestion in addition to his malady. He said:

"I bear no ill will, for I believe the members of the council acted in accordance with their best judgment.

"The doctor tells me I must cheer up and have a good heart. To do that one must have incentive, and I have none."

ELEVATED OPENS NEW CAR LINES FOR RUSH HOURS

Today the Elevated Railway Company established a new line of cars in the Adams street section of Dorchester during the rush hours. This line will be through Dorchester avenue to Franklin street. Lines will also be operated during rush hours from the corner of Dorchester street and Geneva avenue for Dudley street, between 7:30 and 9:12 p. m., and for posts office square during the morning and evening rush hours. In Somerville a new line has been provided by a transfer from Powder House square to Sullivan square Terminal via Broadway.

Today's hours for transfer privilege will be established at the Lamson Park car house on the corner of Dorchester and Forest Hills to inward South Huntington avenue cars and from south bound at avenue cars to outward bound at Forest Hills. To Huntington avenue.

It is proposed to passengers boarding the car in the subway, or to passengers tendering check for transfer at Massachusetts and Huntington avenues.

CAPT. CLARK, LEADER IN G. A. R. CIRCLES, DIES IN BERMUDA

Cables received in Charlestown announce the death of pneumonia in Bermuda where he had gone for a pleasure trip, of Captain Linus R. Clark, a prominent Grand Army man in New England. Captain Clark was a member of the staff of Department Commander Edward H. Hooker of the Massachusetts department, and he recently retired from the position of chief of staff to the office of the quartermaster general of the State militia. In his younger life he was in the express business.

He was a past commander and adjutant of Abraham Lincoln Post No. 11, G. A. R., of Charlestown, and served in the Seventh War in Company I, Eight Massachusetts Regiment.

For many years he lived on High street Charlestown, but lately he has been residing with relatives in Wolfboro, N. H.

EDISON COMPANY WILL BUILD A BIG PARK SQ. STATION

Another important Park square development was announced by the recording of a sale by the New Haven railroad to the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston of the land on Court place on Stuart street for the building of an auxiliary station for that company's system. The company will this spring begin the construction of a six-story fireproof substation on the property it is buying. This station will serve a territory south of Park square, and is expected by its officials to have ultimately a bigger capacity than any of its existing substations. The new expenditure will be between $300,000 and $400,000.

ROXBURY TEACHER CLAIMS A SHARE IN HUNDRED MILLION

JURISDICTION PROTEST BASIS TO SAVE DORR

C. Neal Barney, senior counsel for William A. Dorr, convicted in the first degree for the murder of George E. Marsh of Lynn, will base his fight in the higher courts to save his client from the death penalty on the question of jurisdiction.

The contention that the killing, which Dorr admitted, occurred in Suffolk county and that an Essex county jury had no legal authority to pass upon the question of the Californian's guilt or innocence, will form one of the most striking arguments in Attorney Barney's bill of exceptions.

Attorney Barney will also place emphasis upon the refusal of the trial justice to permit him to inspect the contents of the "diary of death and love" before it was offered in evidence.

He is now busy drafting his bill of exceptions. The court has allowed him twenty days in which to file them. Sentence of death has been deferred until then.

As to the question of jurisdiction, often raised, but seldom in a more novel manner than in the Dorr case, the fight promises to be stubborn.

Attorney Barney believes that he has raised technicalities which seriously affect his client's constitutional rights and offer fertile field for argument. He and Dorr took upon the law points raised by the young Lynn lawyer with such optimism that Dorr is clinging to them as tenaciously as a drowning man does to a straw.

If there be any, although he does not shun from death. Attorney Barney has found that the law points involved in his exceptions are unusually weighty and formidable.

Cured This Boston Woman's Eczema

Boston, Mass.: "About ten years ago I became afflicted with eczema on my right hand; first the skin became scaly, then large cracks in the joints and between the fingers, at times bleeding. The skin beside up rough and dry, in time getting red, burning and very painful. I had tried all the advertised remedies, with no good result. About three months ago I bought a jar of Resinol Ointment and a cake of Resinol Soap, and from the first application I got relief. I have used only two jars of Resinol Ointment, and my hand looks and feels as well as ever. I do my own housework, and use soaps and cleansers that used to irritate, but no ill effects now." WOMEN'S WORK PLEASES MRS. PHOEBE HEARST

NEW YORK, March 1.—Mrs. Phoebe Hearst of California was the guest of honor yesterday at the Woman's Industrial Exhibition in the Grand Central Palace. Mrs. Nelson Henry escorted Mrs. Hearst about the hall and showed her the hundreds of interesting results of women's work.

With Mrs. Henry, Mrs. Elmer Black and Mrs. A. Bruce, Mrs. Hearst partook of an electric luncheon at which, as head of the New York Edison Company exhibit, Miss Nellie Keins was hostess. Everything eaten by the four guests was prepared either on the table before them or in the kitchenette de luxe, which is a part of the artistically arranged dining room. There were creamed chicken with mushrooms (prepared in a chafing dish on the table), new potatoes, jellied apples, cakes, and also coffee (prepared on the table in an electric coffee pot).

Mrs. Hearst wore a gown of heliotrope with a hat to match.

In speaking of her enjoyment of the exhibition she said:

It has given me great pleasure to be Mrs. Henry's guest today, and I am amazed at the wonderful things women are doing in this country. It only goes to show what women can do if given the opportunity.

This exhibition is worthy of the work of any one, regardless of sex, but I am extremely pleased that it is women who are making such a splendid showing in all the vocations and varied work they have undertaken.

An attractive feature of the exhibition is an old "New England Village" in miniature, with the village green in the centre, showing the church and a beautiful perspective of outlying country.

Mrs. John A. Dix was to be the guest of Stony Wold tearoom today, and Mrs. Edward Hewitt will be entertained on Monday evening.

EXPERT URGES FUR COAT FOR WILSON

CAMBRIDGE AND BOSTON ENGLISH WIN AT ARENA

Two games were played in the Boston AMERICAN schoolboy hockey series at the Arena this morning, and both proved to be one-sided affairs. In the first game Cambridge High and Latin easily outclassed the Brookline High seven and won by the score of 8 to 0. In the second contest Boston English High had an easy time beating Boston Latin, 14 to 0.

The Cambridge-Brookline game started off as if it was to be a hard-fought battle, but it did not take the Cambridge boys long to hit their stride, and the puck was soon caged. Baker broke the ice with the first goal, but Thomas followed along in quick order with another goal. Donald Sands scored two goals and the first half ended with the score 4 to 0.

The play in the second half was nearly all in front of the Brookline cage and Nash scored one goal, Baker two and Sands one. In the second half Captain Sands played several of his substitutes.

CAMBRIDGE LATIN.		BROOKLINE HIGH.
Nash, Fitzgerald, Coward, c.		c., Rose
Thomas, c.		c., Thomas
Sands, r.		r., Sands
Baker, l.		l., Higgins
Sanderson, Cole, c.p.		c.p., Sanderson
Bradley, Mosher, p.		p., Cole
Wells, g.		g., Clark

Score—Cambridge Latin, 8; Brookline High, 0. Goals scored—Nash, Thomas, Sands, 2; Baker, 2. Referee—Baker.

English High had everything its own way in its game with Roxbury Latin and were the easy winners. From the start the play was in the Latin territory and on but few occasions did the Latin players get the puck out of the danger zone. In the first minute of play Quincy caged the first goal and after the face-off he scored his second. The score at the end of the first half was 7 to 0, and one of these goals was scored by Lavin of Latin School. Lavin intercepted a shot and hit the puck into his own goal.

The English boys, with several substitutes in the lineup, continued its slaughter in the second half and scored seven more goals. "Mickey" Roach played a great game for the English team and was in the play all of the time. He scored three goals, resulting from his clever individual play. The lineup:

RILEY'S COLUMN

SOMEWHERE—out Missouri way—and somewhere else—down South on the Pennsylvania Railroad—are parts of two Boston baseball clubs, in the first stages of a baseball season. Somewhere—out Missouri way, headed for Hot Springs—two baseball players, Bad Bill Carrigan and Long Leslie Nunnmaker, are breaking in with two or more newspaper writers to show the way, and fifty-two cards and a sack of chips as implements of warfare. Somewhere—down the Pennsylvania line—headed for Athens, Ga., are more Boston ball players—lot of them—and more newspaper men, with the same kind of cards—a red deck and a blue deck—and the same kind of chips, breaking into another baseball year the same way. By the time they arrive where they are started for they should be proficient enough—"broke" or not—to last through six months of it and travel merrily, the 20,000 miles a big league player has to travel every year. Which, as Little Bobby says, is all I know about baseball training trips.

"Theoretically, a correct pack of cards. Sometimes, there are more or less, the exact number at any particular time being a moot ink, as the fire insurance men say.

THAT is an old, old story. But here is a new, new one. Listen. You have not heard anything this year about new Tango twists, Frisco frips, Congo curves, Hippo hops or Fenway fadeaways discovered by the pitchers in training camps. Instead you have been regaled with such novelty headlines as "League Champions Train at Golf," "Cubs Play Tennis in Training," "White Sox Try Marples as a Limberer of the Knee Muscles," Now comes we (on the strength of a baseball training trip. Listen again. Then to the next chapter.

Next chapter. Ray Collins, who is Jake Stahl's champion sontipaw, has found a new means of preparing the finger, wrist and forearm muscles for championship baseball pitching, on account of which he demands a raise in salary for performing with the Red Sox this year. This reveals the reason why Collins is the only remaining Sox "gold-out." Collins feared he was losing his grip. The lanky left-hander felt early this Winter that he was losing the knack of twisting a curve ball. He tried all the known remedies, from parallel bars to Dr. Smith's Curve Cure, without success. Finally he tackled the family flivver in Burlington, Vt. Instantly he felt himself "coming back." So he went around and milked the neighbors' cows—eleven of them. It was an awful task, but though nearly exhausted, he succeeded. Now he swears he can throw a curve ball all the way around the barn and catch it coming back. He thinks he has solved the problem of the one-man battery, so much sought for in the long years of baseball, when Cy Young, reading about the discovery of the boomerang by Harvard explorers in Australia, honestly believed that a team might some day get along with eight men.

COLLINS came to town expecting to trade on his experience. He believed that, being able to do two men's work—pitch and catch at the same time—he was entitled to two men's pay. Jimmy McAleer, his boss, said he was willing to give him the money if he could deliver the goods. McAleer is from Missouri. He and Collins sought a Bedford dairy for a try-out. They found that in Boston dairies cows are milked by electric machinery. That put the kibosh on the demonstration. So they have been unable to come to terms, pending the arrival of a real, blue ribbon, hand-milked cow in Boston.

THE AMERICAN, being always first in the field, went into the question with experts, specially engaged by this paper. "Hub" Perdue, who hails from Gallatin, Tenn.; "Buster" Brown, who farms up in Ouawa, Minn., and Elias McQuaid, who, among other things, is a scientific agriculturist in New England, allow "joint as such thing. They aver that Collins could not milk a cow. They swear that the nature of the beast specifies a right-handed man, or a right-handed maid, properly seated on the right side of the beast—more delicately described as the starboard side, and, they stoutly insist, and stake their reputation upon the proposition, that if Ray Collins, left-hander, asserts that he milked eleven cows, unassisted, without offering a mark of violence to prove it, Ray Collins is trying to put one over on us poor, ignorant city folks. Qualifying as experts, they volunteer to appear in McAleer's defence and to prove that the thing is scientifically and theoretically impossible. As experts, they advise McAleer to demand that Collins show him the sign of the cloven hoof imprinted on his brow or on his breast, before McAleer accepts the story.

Collins in training. As an act of mercy, the artist put him on the right side of the cow.

WE know whereof we speak. Even though right-handed ourselves, we once tried to milk a cow on the port side and only the intervention of a charitable providence and a handy bale of hay, serving as a buffer between us and the barn door, permitted us to survive and refute this accusation. Cows are particular.

WE advise Ray Collins to find a left-handed cow and get a reputation.

TUFTS COACH OUT TO MAKE BATTING TEAM

The progress of the Tufts baseball squad during the past week under the direction of Coach "Wirt" Cannell has been most successful. The job which the coach has on hand this year is to develop a batting team, for in the past it has been in this department that Tufts has shown the greatest weakness.

In addition to increasing the batting there is the problem of developing at least two good pitchers to alternate with "Win" Adams. This will be absolutely necessary because of the hard schedule this year, which calls for many hard games on consecutive days. There are several likely looking men among the candidates. "Ray" Kreppa, '16, the former Mercerburg Academy pitcher, is showing up very well. He is a clever southpaw, with a good assortment of curves and a barrel of speed. Harris, '16, formerly of the Allen school, is out, and shapes up very well. Lee, the varsity second baseman, has been doing considerable pitching, though he can hardly be sacrificed, because of his remarkable fielding and hitting ability. All of the infield positions will be well taken care of unless all indications fail. Captain Bill Bennett will be a fixture on the initial sack. Proctor, varsity shortstop last year, and Lee, the second baseman, will both be forced to the limit.

The other men who have shown up exceptionally well the last week are Armstrong, O'Brien of Holy Cross, Levanthan of second team and Anderson of Dean.

"Chipole" Gaw, the New England League pitcher, has been assisting Coach Cannell by throwing a varied assortment of balls to the batters. Captain Hooper of last year's team has been giving much help and has taken personal charge of the outfield candidates.

Gallant and Alger Battle to Draw at Lowell Club

LOWELL, March 1.—At the rooms of the Lowell A. C. Gilbert Gallant of Chelsea and George Alger of Cambridge went the twelve rounds in the main bout to a draw. Alger was the stronger of the two, Alger showed more scientific work. The last two rounds were very fast and both men were at it in lively fashion when the gong sounded.

Young" Morgan of Manchester, N. H. and Harney Riley of Boston put up a fine battle. In the first half of the bout Riley smothered Morgan with blows to the kidneys, but after he had his man well sized up, Morgan went in and fought

MANAGER M'GRAW SELECTS A TEAM FOR GAME TODAY

MARLIN, Tex., March 1.—Manager McGraw has chosen the lineup for the team that will face Dallas today and Sunday. The team will be made up as follows:

Groh, shortstop; Cooper, right field; Doyle, second base; Burns, left field; Thorpe, first base; Jacobson, centre field; Rock, third base, and Harris, catcher.

The pitchers who will accompany the expedition will be drafted from the rookie ranks. Rader, Smith, Gonlatt and Schupp will test their wares against the Dallas natsaneh.

QUINLAN IS VICTOR.

BIDDEFORD, Me., March 1.—Jimmy Quinlan of Danvers, Mass., knocked out "Young" Cote of this city in the first round of what was to have been a double six-round bout at the rooms of the Crescent A. C. Cote was knocked to the floor three times before he got the finishing uppercut, a blow to the point of the jaw.

PILGRIMS SQUAD NOW ON WAY TO SOUTHERN CAMP

NEW YORK, March 1.—The Boston Pilgrims left this city this afternoon for their training camp at Athens, Ga., where they will start training for the opening of the 1913 baseball campaign. The Boston party arrived here early this morning. There were three players in the party. They were Captain Bill Sweeney, George Tyler and Fred Mitchell. There was also Secretary Nickerson, Trainer Jimmy Neary and his assistant, Henry Blood, and four newspapermen.

The men will arrive in Athens tomorrow. Several players will join the squad en route to the South, while others will go to the training camp direct from their homes.

Bill Sweeney is feeling in the best of spirits and in the pink of condition. Evidently stage life agreed with Sir William for he has developed a very fine sense of humor and his jokes and tales of his career on the stage are interesting.

Bill says that he is in the best of condition and that he will set the league afire by his work this year. Sweeney is one of the few real ball tossers on the Pilgrims payroll and if he were with the Red Sox or any other championship aggregation he would undoubtedly be considered one of the greatest players in the game.

M'FARLAND MAY BOX LEGISLATOR TO HELP NEW BILL

CHICAGO, March 1.—Tom Collar demonstration will aid in passing the boxing bill now before the State Legislature, is the belief of Representative George C. Hilton, who drafted the bill. Representative Hilton has challenged Packey McFarland to meet him in a four-round exhibition before members of both Houses soon in the arsenal at Springfield.

Hilton is a skilled amateur boxer and declares he is prepared to receive a majority of the punches if he can convince the lawmakers that boxing, as regulated under his bill, is a clean, scientific sport and should be permitted in Illinois.

BATES BEATS ROSE IN CLOSE MATCH

The eleventh game of the three cushion billiard tournament for the championship of New England, running at the White Bear Billiard Hall, was played last night, and resulted in a win for Bates over Rose by the score of 50 to 47 points. This was the most interesting game of the series, so far, and the winner was in doubt up to the last inning. Carroll will play Ammidon tonight.

TUFTS TRACK MEN ARE DOING WELL

The members of the Tufts College track squad are showing great improvement under the careful guidance of Coach John A. MacDonald. A large squad of high and broad jumpers has been working out every night, and, while they are not performing wonders for height and distance, Coach MacDonald is very much pleased with the showing that they have made thus far.

SOMERVILLE BEATEN IN CLOSE GAME

Rindge Tech defeated Somerville High in the Interscholastic league series at the Boston Arena yesterday, 2 to 1. The Rindge team forced a hard attack in the first half and scored two goals through good playing.

Cy Young's Last Game—Pitched It at Athens

By RILEY.

ATHENS, Ga., where the Pilgrims are now pointed for, was the scene of "Cy" Young's last appearance as a baseball pitcher. After working that good old arm of his into shape at Augusta last Spring, Cy went over to Athens, where the Pilgrims met the Buffalo Internationals, then managed by George Stallings, who now bosses the Pilgrims. There he made his last stand. The issue was to determine whether he could start another league season. Cy cut loose. For three innings he stood the batters on their heads, as in the olden days. For seven innings Cy pitched to the Bisons, giving all that he had. They scored two runs off him and won the game, 2 to 1. In the seventh Cy blew up. The next day at Columbia, Cy celebrated his forty-sixth birthday anniversary.

"How do you feel, Cy? Do you think you can twirl another year?" asked the writer.

"The old arm doesn't feel right," he said, reluctantly. "I've caught cold in it, I'm afraid. It's the first time in my life that I ever had a cold in my arm. I tell you what, don't say anything about it. I don't want to make a show of myself. I don't want to go into a game and get knocked out of the box. I don't want to stick until I'm kicked out. I'm afraid that if my arm doesn't come around, I'm done. I had hoped to stick one more season, but I'm afraid the old arm is gone. Don't say anything about it; it may come back. I'll tell you later if it doesn't. I'll try but I'll quit if it doesn't."

THAT afternoon Cy tried to warm up but it was no use. The old wing had gone. The baseball writers said nothing about it. Cy stuck along for several weeks, trying to get his good old flinger in shape again. But Cy young had pitched his last game and, reluctantly, yes, almost mournfully, he finally confessed, as he had said he would, that he was "through." He held on gamely but he could not beat nature forever. When he saw it was no use he threw up the sponge. He never went back to the minors. He never waited to "get knocked out of the box."

JOHNNY KLING IS SIGNED BY REDS

CINCINNATI, March 1.—President August Herrmann of the Cincinnati National League team has announced here that Johnny Kling, the catcher, had signed a contract to play with the local baseball team the coming season.

SOX BATTERIES START SPRING WORK MONDAY

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 1.—By this time tomorrow Manager Garland Stahl, of Boston's valiant World's Champions, will be joined by his battery men, and commencing Monday morning Majestic Park, which is in perfect condition for baseball purposes, will be the abode, forenoon and afternoon, of the gallant aggregation of diamond warriors from the Hub.

Manager Stahl hopes that Ray Collins will come to terms with President McAleer in time to board the train with the baseball party, and in the big chief's opinion, Ray is such a bouncing, growing youth, he requires a lot of hard work in the Spring in order to be ready for the opening shots when the curtain goes up on the championship race.

Stahl in Great Condition.

Stahl is looking the picture of health. He states that he is twenty pounds lighter than this time a year ago, and he looks the part. Furthermore, he is as brown as a berry, as a result of his California trip and his week's loafing in the sun. He was in a reminiscent mood today and said:

"Now that another baseball campaign is to start, the old one will be forgotten in jig time. Tell the good people of Boston that I like my veterans, like my pennsioners, like my team and like my chances. It will be my aim to give the fans of Boston another championship team, and next October will be time enough to talk about what is going to happen in the world's series.

"You can add, and you will be telling nothing but the gospel truth, that Bill Carrigan and I are the best of friends. That he is not jealous of Cady because the kid caught most of the games in the big series with Johnny Meyer's Giants last October, and that Joe Wood and Heck O'Brien did not have any scrap not even an argument. One of our best assets last season was harmony. We had it all season, and we had it throughout the world's series. Furthermore, we will have it again this year."

Seven Recruit Pitchers.

The weather has been bright and clear the past fortnight. However, yesterday it was dark and dreary. Stahl is confident that the weather is going to behave and that the battery men will have the brightest of sunny skies to play under when work is started at Majestic Park, Monday. Of course, the early work will not be very spirited. Just the same, Stahl intends having his men begin as soon as possible, as there are seven young pitchers, "Dutch" Leonard included, to look after.

WALLACE SIGNED BY THE BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, March 1.—Roderick Wallace, the veteran shortstop of the St. Louis American League baseball team, has affixed his name to a 1913 contract, he eighteenth annual major league contract he has signed.

DARTMOUTH AND B. A. A. IN RACE FOR THE TITLE

By THOMAS J. HALPIN
(Quarter-Mile Champion of the United States and Canada).

HALPIN

Now that the New England champions have been selected the school boys will receive their full share of attention this afternoon when over four hundred lads will strive for the honors and prizes offered by the B. A. A. at the twenty-fourth annual schoolboy contest.

While the schoolboys will be the principal attraction at the meet, there has been added to the program this year a feature which is sure to keep the spectators on their feet during the entire race. That is no less than the world's championship indoor relay race at two miles between the Boston Athletic Association and Dartmouth.

Both Teams Are Undefeated.

Although many cannot understand why this should be a world's championship race, yet it is easily understood when one considers the calibre of the contestants. Dartmouth is the undefeated champion of the college world, having won from the wonderful Cornell team at the Intercollegiate indoor championships in New York. They captured this race despite the marvelous running of the great John Paul Jones, the intercollegiate half mile champion.

The Unicorn team has not met defeat this year and has vanquished the fast Irish American A. C. and New York A. C. teams twice. There is not a club team in the United States capable of competing with the B. A. A. relay team at the mile or two mile distance. Consequently the winner of this afternoon's race may well claim the championship in the United States. As there is no indoor running in any other part of the world to compare with that in this country an indoor championship here is an indoor champion of the world.

The Dartmouth team can see no way of losing this contest as they have Dolan, Harmon, Marcoux and Bell, all capable of turning the distance in two minutes. The B. A. A. team that will line up against them will consist of Caldwell, Hedlund, Marcoux and the writer. These men all competed last night in the New England championships so that they will be a little off form for this race but coach John A. Ryder is confident that with the aid of Hedlund the Back Bay club will pull through a winner.

Hope to Break Record.

The diminutive fair haired runner, who many claim could run on the rim of a tea cup, should prove far faster than any of the many fliers entered in the meet. The Athletic Committee has offered a special prize to the Unicorn team if they succeed in running so breaking the record for the distance which is held by the Harvard team of 1911. The record is 7m. 1⅘s.

In the thirty-fifth game of the B class amateur billiard tourney at the Elite last night, Smith defeated Percival, 200 to 169.

MONTREAL, March 1.—In two straight falls, Poradis, the New England wrestler, defeated Eugene Tremblay here last night. The first fall took 55 minutes and the second 15 minutes. Tremblay was not fast enough for his youthful opponent.

NEW HAVEN, March 1.—The University and freshman crews were to have begun active work in the harbor yesterday afternoon, but did not, owing to their examinations and the cold weather.

New England Stars Selected to Start in Title Tourney

At the conclusion of the indoor championship meet of the N. E. A. A. A. U., last night, the championship committee of the association met at the B. A. A. and selected the team that will represent the association of the senior National championships to be held next Thursday evening, March 6, in New York.

It will be composed of Howard P. Drew of the Springfield High School, C. A. Rice of Powder Point School and Francis P. O'Hara of the B. A. A. in the 75-yard dash; Fred Burns of the B. A. A. in the 300-yard run; Thomas J. Halpin of the B. A. A. in the 600-yard run; E. E. Cochran of the B. A. A. in the 1,000-yard run; Owen Hedlund and Joseph G. Riley of the B. A. A. in the two-mile run; J. B. Cummings of Harvard in the high hurdles; J. C. Lawler, unattached, in the 24-lb. shotput and H. Bagwise of the B. A. A. in the running high jump.

The athletic committee of the B. A. A. also decided to send J. Ulgh along to compete in the high hurdles.

MICKEY DUNN WINS.

NEW YORK, March 1.—Mickey Dunn of this city had the better of Battling Reddy, another local lad, after ten rounds of fast milling before the New Polo A. A. Dunn was the aggressor throughout.

Shafer to Sign a Long Contract With the Giants

MARLIN, Tex., March 1.—Harry McCormick, the great pinch hitter, who is here with the squad, is now the only Giant who hasn't signed his contract. Tilly Shafer, who was used as a utility infielder most of last season, has at last come to terms with Manager McGraw, and when he comes here next week from his home in Los Angeles he will sign a three years' contract. This is proof positive that Manager Mac thinks highly of the speedy Californian.

Early in the Winter Shafer said he would never play again because he was tired of receiving "scented notes." Later he declared that he would never play again because of the way his teammates abused Fred Snodgrass for his fatal muff in the deciding game with the Red Sox.

Shafer could afford to hold out until he got the contract he wanted because he is independently wealthy. He was the regular shortstop last Fall until his mother died, and upon his return from the funeral Arthur Fletcher was in his shoes, and continued to fill them the rest of the season.

Bat Nelson Sends Divorce Story Down for Count

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 1.—When "Battling" Nelson, pugilist, arrived in Savannah from New York he denied knowledge of any intention on the part of his wife, Mrs. Fay Nelson, when the Denver cartoonist, to sue for divorce, as reported in a news dispatch from Portland, Ore. Nelson said:

This is staggering, and as far as I know there is not a word of truth in it. Mrs. Nelson is now in Denver, and I have been writing to her and receiving letters from her regularly. The name of her father is Jack King, and he and I are the best of friends. I am now planning to either meet Mrs. Nelson in Chicago on March 11, or go to Denver to celebrate her birthday. We are on the best of terms.

REVERE HIGH IS WINNER OF GAME

Revere High outclassed Oliver Ames at basketball in the Revere "gym" last night, the score being 39 to 20. Revere was on edge for fast work, while Oliver Ames missed many shots for the basket. Sensational shooting for the winners was done by O'Keefe, W. Nelson and Hates, while Colter and Malloy did the best playing for Oliver Ames.

CHESS CHAMPIONS ARE STILL TIED

HAVANA, March 1.—In the tenth round of the chess tournament played here victories were scored by Janowski and Kupchik respectively over Corzo and Blanco. The games between Capablanca and Marshall and Chajes and Jaffe were adjourned. Capablanca and Marshall are tied for first place, each having won seven games and lost two. Kupchik is third with six games won and four lost, and Janowski fourth with a score of five and one-half games won and two and one-half lost.

REEVES COACH OF HARVARD '16 BASEBALL TEAM

Through Graduate Treasurer W. F. Garceau of the Harvard Athletic Association, a contract has been made with Henry E. Reeves, '12, to coach the freshman baseball team this Spring. Mr. Reeves, who was catcher on the varsity for two years, has taken charge of the entire freshman squad of about sixty men.

The freshmen out for battery places are as follows:

Pitchers, H. A. Coolidge, A. Cunningham, G. A. McKinlock, W. Whitney; catchers, A. B. Bennison, C. S. Clark, C. H. Jameson, S. M. Richardson, T. H. Safford, R. L. Small.

The following men have been retained on the varsity battery squad:

Pitchers, Felton, Frye, Hardy, Hitchcock, MacDonald, Sturgis, Waterman, Withington; catchers, Bradlee, Osborne, Weatherhead, Waterman.

EXETER ROOTERS ARE NOT OVER CONFIDENT

EXETER, N. H., March 1.—The Phillips-Exeter track team left Exeter this morning for the B. A. A. meet. The entire team is in good condition and the sentiment of the student body as to the outcome of the meet is optimistic. Exeter will not be represented by a midget relay team, as last year, on account of the weight limit being lowered to ninety pounds. About 200 students will leave Exeter on the special train leaving Exeter at 12:40.

ARLINGTON-MELROSE PLAY TIE GAME

After sixty-five minutes of actual play the Arlington High-Melrose High school hockey game, which was played at the Boston Arena last night, was declared a tie, as the score stood 2 to 2—and the schoolboy championship of Massachusetts is still unsettled. The game was witnessed by about 2,000 people, the largest crowd that ever attended a schoolboy hockey game in this city.

Canadian Sevens Clash in Hockey Game at Arena

THE LINEUP.

SHERBROOKES.		STEWARTONS.

Allen, r.		Dion
Maguire, r.w.		Graham
Springins, Cp.		Kerr
Skilton, p.		Fournier
Arguin, s.		Hebert

The Sherbrooke hockey team, which plays the Stewartons of Ottawa at the Boston Arena tonight will have a hard task sinning, according to the advance reports received here of the strength of the Stewartons.

An exciting contest is predicted, for the battle is for the championship of Eastern and Western Canada. It will also be the first game ever played in this city between two amateur Canadian teams.

The ability of the Sherbrooke players is well known, and that they will fight to the very last was well demonstrated in their over-time game with the Pilgrim A. A. seven last Thursday night. That contest will go down as one of the best ever played in this city. The defeat of the Sherbrookes still rankles, and they promise to fight all the harder against the Stewartons tonight.

The Stewartons are rated as one of the fastest Septets in Canada, and they have just finished a successful season in the Ottawa section of the Interprovincial Union, being beaten out in the final only after Dion and Gilmour, their star forwards, had been injured in a game two nights previous.

SHEA IS BEATEN.

NEW HAVEN, March 1.—Young McAuliffe of Bridgeport and Joseph Kid Shea of Waterbury fought twelve rounds here. The bout was about even up to the end of the seventh round, when McAuliffe's blows began to tell on Shea. Shea revived in the twelfth, but McAuliffe won on points.

EASY FOR SOLDIER.

NEW HAVEN, March 1.—"Young" Terry of Brooklyn was substituted for George Alger of Boston, who failed to appear, and was stopped in the fifth round of his bout with Soldier Barfield at the East New York A. C. Terry was no match for the soldier.

NELSON TO HAVE CHANCE TO COME BACK FOR TITLE

By H. M. WALKER.

If Battling Nelson can score a win over Frank Whitney in their bout at the Auditorium - Armory March 5, he will be declared in on the elimination tournament for the lightweight championship of America that Tom McCarey is planning to pull on the Pacific Coast.

The six men McCarey has had in mind for a long time were Ritchie, the present champion; Welgast, the former champion; Nelson, who lost the title to Welgast; Mandot, Rivers and Knockout Brown.

Knockout Brown lost his chance when J. Rivers tucked him away in the coast fight the afternoon set apart to celebrate the birth of Colonel G. Washington.

With Brown out four certainties and one possibility remain. The possibility is Battling Nelson.

McCarey has been following Nelson's recent victorious career as eagerly as if he had been declared in on the profits. He knows that no fighter in the world was isn't a born-and-bred "native son" is as popular on the coast as the Battler. He has, therefore, intimated to Jack Robinson, Nelson's manager, that if Nelson can trim Frank Whitney at Atlanta next week as he has been trimming the other good boys he has been meeting for the last few months he is in on the elimination tournament.

And that means another chance for Nelson at the lightweight title.

THE MYSTERY OF MARY

A Thrilling Story of a Strange Disappearance and of a Love That Trusted and Was Triumphant

By GRACE LIVINGSTON HILL LUTZ

"BY the way, mother, I'm sure you'll be glad to hear that Judge Blackwell has made me a most generous offer of business relations, and that I have decided to accept it."

Amid the exclamations of delight over this bit of news, the hat was forgotten for a time, and when the mother and sister finally reverted to it and began to discuss how it could have got on the closet shelf he broke in upon their questions with a suggestion.

"I should advise, mother, that you make a thorough search for your raincoat. I am sure now that you must have overlooked it. Such things often happen. We were so excited the morning Cornelia missed the hat that I suppose no one looked thoroughly."

"But that is impossible, Tyron," said his mother, with dignity. "I had that closet searched most carefully."

"Nevertheless, mother, please me by looking again. That closet is dark, and I would suggest a light."

"I shall not find the raincoat," said his mother sternly, "but of course I will look to satisfy you. I know it is not in this house."

He beat a hasty retreat, for he did not care to be present at the finding of the raincoat.

"There is something strange about this," said Mrs. Dunham, as with ruffled dignity she emerged from the hall closet, holding her lost raincoat at arm's length. "You don't suppose your brother could be playing some kind of a joke on us, do you, Cornie? I never did understand jokes."

"Of course not," said practical Cornelia, with a sniff. "It's my opinion that Norah knows all about the matter, and Tyron has been helping her out with a few suggestions."

"Now, Cornelia, what do you mean by that? You surely don't suppose your brother would try to deceive us—his mother and sister?"

"I didn't say that, mother," answered Cornelia, with her head in the air. "You've got your raincoat back, but you'd better watch the rest of your wardrobe. I don't intend to let Norah have free range in my room any more."

MEANTIME the girl in Chicago was walking in a new and hard way. She brought to her task a disciplined mind, a fine artistic taste, a delicate but healthful body and a pair of willing, if unskilled, hands.

To her surprise she discovered that the work for which she had so often lightly given orders was beyond her strength. Try as she would, she could not accomplish the task of washing and ironing table napkins and delicate embroidered linen pieces in the way she knew they should be done.

Will power can accomplish a good deal, but it cannot always make up for ignorance, and the girl who has mastered difficult subjects in college and astonished music masters in the Old World with her talent found that she could not wash a window even to her own satisfaction, much less to that of her mistress.

Nevertheless, as the weary days succeeded each other into weeks, she found that while her skill in table setting and waiting was much prized it was more than offset by her discrepancies in other lines, and so it came about that with mutual consent she and Mrs. Rhinehart parted company.

This time, with her reference, she did not find it so hard to get another place, and, after trying several, she learned to demand certain things, which put her finally into a home where her ability was appreciated, and where she was not required to do things in which she was unskilled.

Mary's Troubles

Then the son of the house came home from college in disgrace, and began to make violent love to her, until her case seemed almost desperate.

She dreaded inexpressibly to make another change, for in some ways her work was not so hard as it had been in other places, and her wages were better; but from day to day she felt she could scarcely bear the hourly annoyance.

The other servants, too, were not only utterly uncompanionable, but deeply jealous of her, resenting her gentle breeding, her refined speech, her dainty person's ways, her room to herself, her loyalty to her mistress.

Sometimes in the cold and darkness of the night visits she would remember the man who had helped her, who had promised to be her friend, and had begged her to let him know if she ever needed help. Her hungry heart cried out for sympathy and counsel. In her dreams she saw him coming to her across interminable plains, hastening with his kindly sympathy, but she always awoke before he reached her.

"Mary, let me know where and when I can speak with you about a matter of importance. Tryon D., Examiner, L.

These and others appeared in the different papers, but when he began to get communications from all sorts of poor creatures, every one demanding money, and when he found himself running wild goose chases after different Marys and M. K.'s he abandoned all hope of personal columns in the newspapers.

Then he began a systematic search for music teachers and musicians, for it seemed to him that this would be her natural way of earning her living, if she needed him he was ready to help her, even at the sacrifice of his life.

All during the journey he planned a campaign for finding her, until he came to know in his heart that this was the real mission for which he had come to Chicago, although he intended to perform the other business thoroughly and conscientiously.

Upon his arrival in Chicago he inserted a number of advertisements in the daily papers, having laid various plans by which she might safely communicate with him without running the risk of detection by her enemy.

If Mr. B. is in Chicago, will she kindly communicate with T. Dunham, general delivery? Important.

Mrs. Bowman's friend has something of importance to say to the lady who dined with her October 8. Kindly send address to Z, D., Box 7, American office.

"Mary, let me know where and when I can speak with you about a matter of importance. Tryon D., Examiner, L.

These and others appeared in the different papers, but when he began to get communications from all sorts of poor creatures, every one demanding money, and when he found himself running wild goose chases after different Marys and M. K.'s he abandoned all hope of personal columns in the newspapers.

Then he began a systematic search for music teachers and musicians, for it seemed to him that this would be her natural way of earning her living, if she were so hard pressed that this was necessary.

Many a poor soul was helped and strengthened and put into the way of doing better because of this brief contact with him. But always as he saw new miseries he was troubled over what might become of her—"Mary."

It came to pass that whenever he looked upon the face of a young woman, no matter how plucked and worn with poverty, he dreaded lest she might have come to this pass, and be in actual need.

As these thoughts went on day by day, he came to feel that she was his by a God-given right, his to find, his to care for. If she was in peril, he must save her. If she had done wrong—but this he could never believe. Her face was too pure and lovely for that.

Dunham had set apart working hours, and he seemed to labor with double vigor then because of the other task he had set himself. When at last he finished the legal business he had come for, and might go home, he lingered yet a day, and then another, devoting himself with almost feverish activity to the search for his unknown friend.

His Dinner Engagement

It was the evening of the third day after his law work was finished that with a sad heart he went toward the hotel where he had been stopping. He was obliged at last to face the fact that his search had been in vain.

He had almost reached the hotel when he met a business acquaintance, who welcomed him warmly, for far and wide among legal men the firm of which Judge Blackwell was the senior member commanded respect.

"Well, well!" said the older man, "Is this you, Dunham? I thought you were booked for home two days ago. Suppose you come home to dinner with me. I've a notion I'd like to talk over with you before you leave. I shall count this a most fortunate meeting if you will."

Just because he caught at any straw to keep him longer in Chicago, Dunham accepted the invitation. Just as the cab door was flung open in front of the handsome house where he was to be a guest, two men passed slowly by, like shadows out of place, and there floated to his ears one sentence voiced in broadish Irish: "Sha goes by th' name of Mary, ye says? All roight, sorr. I'll keep a sharp look-out."

Tyron Dunham turned and caught a glimpse of silver changing hands. One man was slight and fashionably dressed, and the light that was cast from the neighboring window showed his face to be dark and handsome. The other was short and stout, and clad in a faded Prince Albert coat that bagged at shoulders and elbows. His worn rubbers over his shoes, and his footsteps sounded like those of a heavy dog. The two passed around the corner, and Dunham and his host entered the house.

To Be Continued Monday.

When She Became Disgusted with a Loveless Marriage and Sought Her Freedom—A Powerful Chapter from Hall Caine's Story

"THE WOMAN THOU GAVEST ME"

When the Bonds of the Loveless Marriage Become Strained and Are Almost at the Breaking Point Mary O'Neill, the Heroine of Hall Caine's Compelling Story, Seeks Aid from the Church, from the Law and from Her Father. This Extract from a Long Instalment of the Story in Hearst's Magazine for March Tells of the Causes That Led to Seeking a Dissolution of the Marriage Tie.

Mary O'Neill, daughter of Daniel O'Neill, millionaire of the Island of Ellan, is forced by her father into a loveless marriage with Lord Rax, a dissolute nobleman. She finds out on her honeymoon what it means to be married to a man she does not love and refuses to be wife in anything but name until her husband wins her love.

She travels with her husband through Europe and Egypt, each keeping to their separate rooms, but mingling in society as though they were really man and wife. She becomes disgusted at the people he associates with and surrounds her with, and finally discovers that he is carrying on an affair with Alma, who pretends to be her dearest friend. He takes Alma every place, sometimes with his wife, but more often without her.

Mary falls ill and this leaves her husband and Alma more to themselves. Her illness has little effect on either the husband or his gay companion.

At night they played bridge (the most innocent amusement of my husband's friends), gambled and drank to kill the one enemy of their existence—Time. These illustrations, by Frank Craig, picture climaxes in Hall Caine's story, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me." Reprinted by permission of Hearst's Magazine.

ONE night, after Alma and my husband had gone to a reception in Grosvenor square, I had a sudden stitch of heart-strain and had to be put to bed, whereupon Price, who had realized that I was really ill, told Hobson, my husband's valet, to go after his master and bring him back immediately.

"It'll be all as one, but I'll go if you like," said Hobson.

In half an hour he came back with my husband's answer: "Send for a doctor."

This put Price into a fever of mingled anger and perplexity, and not knowing what else to do, she telegraphed to Marrin on his ship, telling him that I was ill and asking what doctor she ought to call in to see me.

Inside an hour a reply came not from Tilbury but from Portsmouth, saying:

"Call Dr. ——, of Brook street. Am coming up at once."

All this I heard for the first time when Price, with another triumphant look, came into my bedroom flourishing Marrin's telegram.

"You don't mean to say that you telegrapher to Mr. Conrad?" I said.

"Why not?" said Price. "When a lady is ill and her husband pays no attention to her, and there's somebody else not far off who would give his two eyes to save her a pain in her little finger, what is a woman to do?"

I told her what she was not to do. She was not to call the doctor under any circumstances, and when Martin came she was to make it plain to him that she had acted on her own responsibility.

Toward midnight he arrived and Price brought him into my room in a long ulster covered with dust. I blushed and trembled at sight of him, for his face betrayed the strain and anxiety he had gone through on my account, and when he smiled at seeing that I was not as ill as he had thought I was ashamed to the bottom of my heart.

"You'll be sorry you've made such a long journey now that you see there's so little to do with me," I said.

"Sorry?" he said. "By the holy saints, I would take a longer one every night of my life to find you so well at the end of it."

His blue eyes were shining like the sun from behind a cloud and the cruellest looks could not have hurt me more.

I tried to keep my face from expressing the emotion I desired to conceal, and asked if he had caught a train easily from Portsmouth, seeing he had arrived so early.

"No. Oh, no, there was no train up until 11 o'clock," he said.

"Then how did you get here so soon?" I asked, and though he would not tell me at first I got it out of him at last—he had hired a motor car and traveled the ninety miles to London in two hours and a half.

That crushed me. I could not speak. I thought I should have choked. Lying there with Martin at arm's length of me, I was afraid of myself, and did not know what I might do next. But at last, with a great effort to control myself, I took his hand and kissed it, and turned my face to the wall.

INVITATIONS TO CASTLE RAA

THAT was the beginning of the end, and when, next day towards noon, my husband came with drowsy eyes to make a kind of ungracious apology, saying he supposed the doctor had been sent for, I said: "James, I want you to take me home."

"Home? You mean . . . Castle Rax?"

"Yes."

He hesitated, and I began to plead with him, earnestly and eagerly, not to deny me what I asked.

"Take me home, I beg, I pray."

At length, seeing to think I must be homesick, he said: "Well, you know my views about that God-forsaken place, but the season's nearly at an end and I don't mind going back on one condition—that you raise no objection to my inviting a few friends to liven it up a bit?"

"It is your house," I said. "You must do as you please in it."

"Very good; that's settled," getting up to go. "And I daresay it will do you no harm to be out of the way of all this church-going and confessing to priests, who are always depressing people even when they're not making mischief."

Mary Invites Alma

Hardly had my husband left me when Alma came into my sitting room in the most affectionate and insincere of her moods.

"My poor, dear, sweet child," she said, "if I'd had the least idea you were feeling so bad I shouldn't have allowed Jimmy to stay another minute at that dreadful reception. But how good it was of Mr. Conrad to come all that way to see you! Tant's what I call being a friend now!"

Then came the real object of her visit—I saw it coming.

"I hear you're to have a house party at Castle Raa. Jimmy's in his room writing piles of invitations. He has asked me and I should love to go, but of course I can not do so without you wish it—do you?"

What could I say? What I did say I scarcely know. I only know that at the next minute Alma's arms were round my neck, and she was saying, "You dear, sweet, unselfish little soul! Come let me kiss you."

It was done. I had committed myself. After all, what right had I to raise myself on a moral pinnacle now? And what did it matter anyway? I was flying from the danger of my own infidelities, not to save my husband from his.

HUSBANDS AND TOOTH-BRUSHES

WITHIN the next few days the house party arrived. There would be twenty of them at least, not counting valets and ladies' maids, so that large as Castle Raa was, the house was full.

They were about equally divided as to sex and belonged chiefly to my husband's class, but they included Mr. Hastcliff's beautiful wife, Camilla, and Alma's mother, who, much to Alma's chagrin, had insisted upon being invited.

My husband required me to receive them, and I did so, though I was only their nominal hostess, and they knew it, and treated me accordingly.

I should be ashamed to speak of the petty slights they put upon me, how they consulted Alma in my presence and otherwise wounded my pride as a woman by showing me that I had lost my place as a wife in my husband's house.

I know there are people of the same class who are kind and considerate, gentleless and pure, the true nobility of their country—women who are devoted to their homes and children, and men who spend their wealth and strength for the public good—but my husband's friends were not of that kind.

They were vain and proud, selfish, self-indulgent, thoroughly insincere, utterly ill-mannered, shockingly ill-informed, astonishingly ill-educated (save for the several languages in which they could say their smart nothings), living and flourishing in the world without religion, without morality, and (if it is not a cant phrase to use) without God.

Their Guests' Conduct

What their conduct was when out shooting, picnicking, driving, riding, motoring and yachting (for Mr. Eastcliff had arrived in his yacht and it was lying at anchor in the port below the glen), I do not know, for "shelter's orders" were Alma's excuse for not asking me to accompany them.

But at night they played bridge (their most innocent amusement), gambled, and drank, banged the piano, danced "Grizzly Bears," sang duets from the latest musical comedies and then ransacked the empty houses of their idle heads for other means of killing the one enemy of their existence—Time.

Sometimes they would give entertainments in honor of their dogs, when all the animals of all the guests (there seemed to be a whole kennel of them) would be dressed up in coats of silk and satin, with pockets and pocket-handkerchiefs, and then file downstairs to the drawing-room, where Alma's wheezing spaniel and my husband's peevish terrier received them.

Sometimes they would give "freak dinners," when the guests themselves would appear dressed up, the men in women's clothes, the women in men's, the male imitating the piping treble of the female voices, and the female the over-rounded slang of the male until, tired of this foolishness, they would end up by flinging the food at the pictures on the walls, the canal pellet being softened bread and the favorite target the noses in the family portraits, which, bit and covered with a sprawling mess, looked so ridiculous as to provoke screams of laughter.

The talk at the table was generally of horses and dogs, but sometimes it was of love, courtship and marriage, including conjugal fidelity, which was a favorite subject of ridicule, both with the women and the men.

Thus my husband would begin by saying the often said it in my hearing that once upon a time men took their wives as they took their horses, on trial for a year and a day, and "really with some women there was something to say for the old custom."

Then Mr. Vivian would remark that it "a jolly good idea, by Jove," and advise Alma in my presence to get out her father. She finds him ill when she reaches his home, and tells him her story while he is lying in the library.

* * *

I THOUGHT he would pity me. I expected him to be angry. Although he was showing me some of the contemptuous tenderness which he had always assumed toward my mother, yet I was his daughter, and I felt sure that he would want to leap out of bed that he might take my husband by the throat and shake him as a terrier shakes a rat. But what happened was something quite different.

Hardly had I begun when he burst out laughing.

"God bless my soul," he cried, "you're never going to lose yer stomach over a thing like that?"

I thought he had not understood me, so I tried to speak plainer.

"I see," he said. "Spoothering some other woman, is he? Well, what of it? He isn't the first husband who has done the like, and I guess he won't be the last."

Still I thought I had not made myself clear, so I said my husband had been untrue to me, that his infidelities under my own roof had degraded me in my own eyes and everybody else's, that I could not bear to live such a life any longer and consequently

"Consequently," said my father, "you come to me to fight your battles for you. No, no, fight them yourself, gel. No father-in-law ought to interfere."

It was a man's point of view, I suppose, but I was ready to cry with vexation and disappointment, and though I conquered the impulse to do that I could go no farther.

Her Father's Advice

"Who's the woman?" he asked.

I told him it was one of our house party.

"Then cut her out. I guess you're clever enough to do it, whoever she is. You've got the looks, too, and I don't grudge you the money. Cut her out—that's the best way I know."

MANY women, in serving Orange Pekoe to their guests, say: "I want you to try a cup of my tea."

That little word "my" tells an interesting story.

It means that the pure, flowery quality of Orange Pekoe so impresses tea-lovers that—

They think of it as their tea—associate it with their tea-table—and delight in serving it to their friends.

"I see! I see!" said my father. "It's a doctor you want. I must send Conrad to put a sight on you."

if he "ever married, by the Lord, that just what he would do."

Then Mr. Eastcliff would say that it was a ridiculous superstition that a woman should have her husband all to herself, "as if he were a kind of toothbrush which she would not share with anybody else," and somebody would add that she might as reasonably want her dentist or her hairdresser to be kept for her own use only.

After that the ladies, not to be left behind, would join in the off-hand rattle, and one of them would give it as her opinion that a wife might have an incorrigibly unfaithful husband, and yet be well off.

"Ugh!" said Alma one night, shrugging her shoulders. "Think of a poor woman being tied for life to an entirely faithful husband!"

"I adore the kind of man who goes to the deuce for a woman—Parnell, and Boulanger, and Gambetta and that sort," said a "smart" girl of three or four-and-twenty, whereupon Camilla Eastcliff (she was a Russian) replied: "That's why the co-respondents in your divorce courts are so shocking. They're like the villains in the plays—always so dee-lightfully wicked."

Oh, the sickening horror of it all! Whether it was really moral corruption or only effeteration and pose, it seemed equally shocking and though I bore as much of it as I could with a cheerful face, I escaped as often as possible to the clean atmosphere of my own room.

From day to day my mind came to me with fearful little hints about Alma and my husband. I found myself listening to them. I also found myself refreshing my memory of the hideous scene in Paris, and wondering why I had condoned the offense by staying an hour longer under my husband's protection.

And then there was always another force at work within me—my own secret passion. Though sometimes I felt myself to be a wretched sinner and thought the burden I had to bear was heaven's punishment of my guilty love, at other times my whole soul cried in revolt, and I cried out not merely for separation from my husband, but for absolute squandering.

Mary seeks relief from the hands of her marriage from the Bishop and from her father's attorney. Being given no hope by either she seeks advice I can give you. Make your husband see you're the better woman of the two. Cut her out, I'm saying, and don't come whining here like a cry-baby, who runs to her grandmother's apron-strings at the scratch she gets outside."

He had been reaching forward, but he now fell back on his pillows, saying:

"I see how it is, though. Women without children are always vaporing about their husbands, as if married life ought to be a Garden of Eden. One woman, one man and all the rest of the balderdash. I see your Aunt Bridget on you before I go, and I'll have to do it again, I'm thinking. But go away now. If I'm to get better I must have rest. Nessy!" (calling) "I've a mort o' things to do and most everything is on my shoulders. Nessy! Nessy! Nessy! Nessy! Where in the world has that girl gone to?"

"I'm here, Daniel," said Nessy Mac Leod, coming back to the room; and as I went out of it and passed down the corridor, with a crushed and broken spirit and the tears ready to gush from my eyes, I heard her coaxing him in her submissive and insincere tones, while he blamed and scolded her.

Half an hour afterward my Aunt Bridget came to me in my mother's room. Never in my life before had I been so pleased to see her. She, at least, would see my situation with a woman's eyes. But I was doomed to another disappointment.

"Goodness me, girl," she cried, "what's this you've been telling me? One of your own guests, is it? That one with the big eyes, I'll go bail. Well, serve you right, I say, for bringing a women like that into the house with your husband—so smart and such a quality toss with her. If you were lonely coming home, why didn't you ask your aunt or your first cousin? There would have been no trouble with your husband then—not about me at all events. But what are you thinking of doing?"

"Getting a divorce," I answered, firmly, for my heart was now alone.

If I had a revolver in my Aunt Bridget's face she could not have looked more shocked.

"Mary O'Neill, are you mad?" she cried. "Divorce indeed! No woman of our family has ever disgraced herself like that. What will your father say? What's to happen to Betsy Benets? What are people going to think about me?"

I answered that I had not made my marriage, and those who had made it must take the consequences.

"What does that matter now? Hundreds of thousands of women have married the wrong man of their own free-will, but if every woman who has made a rue-bargain were to try to get out of it your way where would the world be, I wonder? Perhaps you think you could marry somebody else, but you couldn't. What decent man wants to marry a divorced woman even if she is the injured party?"

"Then you think I ought to submit—tamely submit to such infidelities?" I asked.

"Sakes alive," said Aunt Bridget, "what else can you do? Men are polygamous animals, and we women have to make up our minds to it. Goodness knows, I had to, when the old colonel used to go hanging around those English barmaids at the 'Cock and Hen.' Be a little blind girl—that's what nine wives out of ten have to be every day and every night and all the world over."

"Will that make my husband any better?" I asked.

"I don't say it will," said Aunt Bridget, "it will make you better, though. What the eye doesn't see the heart doesn't grieve. That's something—isn't it?"

To Take Martin's Advice

When I went to bed that night my whole soul was in revolt. The church, the law, society, parental power, all the conventions and responsibilities seemed to be in a conspiracy to condone my husbands offence and to make me his scapegoat, doomed to a life of hypocrisy and therefore immorality and shame. I would die rather than endure it. Yes, I would die that very day rather than return to my husband's house and go through the same ordeal again.

But next morning when I thought of Martin, as I always did on first awakening, I told myself that I would live and be a clean woman in my own eyes, whatever the world might think of me.

Martin was now my only refuge, so I would tell him everything. It would be hard to do that, but no matter, I would crush down my modesty and tell him everything. And then, whatever he told me to do I would do it.

I knew quite well what my resolution meant, what it implied and involved, but still I thought, "Whatever he tells me to do I will do it."

I remember what the Countess in Rome had said about a life of "complete emancipation" as an escape from unhappy marriage, and even yet I thought, "Whatever he tells me to do I will do it."

After coming to that conclusion I felt more at ease and got up to dress.

TEARFUL FAREWELL

THE bride wept on her mother's shoulder. Her father stood silently by.

"Good-bye," sobbed the newly-made wife; "good-bye forever, my dear parents. We shall never meet again. Woe——"

But the emotion that welled up in her throat choked off further speech. Gently her silver-haired mother stroked the girl's chestnut hair.

"Good-bye, darling," she whispered. "You will think of your fond mother sometimes, won't you? For, remember, we shall never meet again."

The father took the bride's hand tenderly between his own.

"My child," he said, simply and brokenly, "it is true we shall never, never meet again."

The bride went out backward through the open door, her eyes lingering fondly on the last glimpse of the two people she loved most in the whole world, and then——And then she passed into her flat next door.

A GOOD CURE

REV. JOSHUA KIMBER, in his "Reminiscences," tells the following anecdote of the late Bishop Potter:

He had been preaching on the east bank of the Hudson River, stopping for confirmation each day at adjoining parishes. When he reached Dunlop's house he saw a woman at the rail waiting for confirmation who had formerly been a parishioner and was somewhat familiar with. He was also certain that she had been confirmed within the week at another place. The bishop whispered to her to remain after the service was over.

"My dear madam, what do you mean by coming for confirmation? I am sure I confirmed you on Monday at such a place. Did I not?"

She said: "Yes certainly did. I have been following you up the river and have been confirmed every day this week."

He astonished, said: "Why did you do that?"

Whereupon she replied: "Because I heard it was good for rheumatism."

A note to his father read: "This is the end. Doctor states no hope. Will be total idiot."

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

Stock markets improved at the close today, Boston in particular making a good showing. At the end the most gains were by North Butte, up 1¾; Lake 1⅝, Chino 1⅜, Old Dominion 1¼ and Calumet & Arizona a point higher.

A number of coppers were fractionally stronger here. They rose in the New York market, Anaconda, Amalgamated, American Smelting and Utah all ending in advances. Utah Copper's gain was more than two points. Almost all the standard railroad and industrial issues finally showed an improvement. Trading had been limited in volume, however.

The New York statement reads: "Average statement: Excess cash reserve $8,922,250; decrease $131,900; loans, decrease $15,108,000; specie, decrease $4,131,000; legal tenders, decrease $36,000; net deposits, decrease $15,760,000; circulation, increase $102,000. Actual statement: Loans, increase $11,883,000; specie, decrease $8,757,000; legal tenders, increase $96,000; net deposits, increase $8,874,000; reserve, decrease $10,485,400.

How New York Market Began.

The New York market turned heavy after the opening. At the start a few issues made fractional gains, but these soon became heavy. Steel was one of the stocks to lose an earlier gain. The trading element on the floor held on the argument that speculators and financiers will be disappointed over the Wilson cabinet.

Corn products issues were among active stocks. The common dropped a half and the preferred a full point. It was reported there is a federal suit against the corporation.

Some pressure was applied to a number of railroads. Union Pacific opened fractionally higher but at the end of twenty minutes had lost its gain. There were similar movements in Reading, Atchison, Lehigh Valley and others.

Among the advances were American Smelting ¼, Anaconda Copper ½, Ray Consolidated Copper ¼, Utah Copper ½, Woolworth ½, Inter-Met. ⅛, Chino Copper ⅜ and Canadian Pacific ½.

Southern Pacific declined ⅛ on the first sale, but recovered and made a fractional gain over Friday's closing. In the specialty list Loose-Wiles Biscuit was weak, losing one point. California Petroleum declined ⅝.

The Curb was quiet.

Sentiment was confident on the London Stock Exchange, but ambulance was as light as usual at the week-end. Reports regarding the Balkan situation were encouraging. After advancing, American stocks closed below the best and prices were irregular. The improvement in Canadian Pacific was due to January earnings.

Outlook in Steel Trade.

Regarding the outlook in the steel trade it is predicted the United States Steel Corporation will report on March 10 that in February new business fell off more than in January. It is believed by some authorities that the decrease may range from 200,000 to 250,000 tons. The corporation, however, is operating at 90 per cent, capacity and would increase its output if it could get all the help needed. Lack of labor is one of the biggest problems the management is now grappling with. The slowing up of steel business at this time was expected. Uncertainty over tariff changes is causing consumers to withhold orders which otherwise would have been placed recently.

Financial News in Brief.

Gold shipments this week amounted to only $300,000, which was taken for Buenos Ayres. Total shipments of gold from New York since January 9 amounted to $28,809,000, of which $17,800,000 was sent to Argentina and $11,000,000 to France.

Copper prices are 14⅝ to 14⅝ cents per pound for electrolytic delivered thirty days, and buying is fairly steady.

Virginia Railway & Power Company declared a semi-annual dividend of 1½ per cent., comparing with 1 per cent. previously.

Baltimore & Ohio has ordered sixty Mikado type and thirty Pacific type engines, which will cost $2,225,000.

New York Stock Exchange has admitted to dealings Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railway Company rights, and M. Rumley Company rights.

American Linseed Company has reduced its price on all grades of linseed oil 3 cents a gallon.

Baldwin Locomotive Works reports for the year ended December 31, 1912, gross sales, $26,024,633, a decrease of $413,501; manufacturing profits, $8,552,669, an increase of $208,825; net profits, $3,698,371, an increase of $435,091.

Goldfield Consolidated Mines Company has resumed dividends, declaring a dividend of thirty a share, payable April 30. The December dividend was passed.

Yukon Gold Mining Company reports for the year ended December 31, 1912, production, $4,863,448; working costs, $2,142,929; operating gain, $2,721,419; balance after charges, $1,072,091.

Commercial failures this week in the United States, as reported by R. G. Dun & Co., are 263 against 334 last week, 329 the preceding week and 866 the corresponding week last year.

Gay & Sturgis have heard from Houghton about a strike in Superior and Boston between the sixth and eighth levels. A cross cut in this ore has been driven toward foot wall for a distance of more than twenty-five feet in good ore. Neither the foot wall nor hanging wall is in sight. On the sixth level the workings are also breaking into same vein.

At a meeting of the trustees of the Curlew Limb Specialty Company, held yesterday, a dividend of 2 per cent. was declared, payable March 6 to stockholders of record March 1.

Dr. Greene's NERVURA
stands pre-eminent before the public for all diseases of the NERVOUS SYSTEM and all disorders arising from an IMPURE CONDITION OF THE BLOOD.

Dr. Greene, Dear Sir: Troy, Pa., Jan. 11, 1913.
Dear Friend—I have received many wonderful benefits from the use of your Nervura. Ten years ago I had nervous prostration and lost the use of my eyes. After the first bottle could see a great change and after taking six bottles was just as well as ever. Can thankfully say it restored my mind and life. You are welcome to use this letter.
Miss. WOODFORD CLARK

Dr. Greene, specialist in nervous and chronic diseases, may be consulted personally or by mail, free. 597 Albany St., Boston.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

"One of the most important truck deals of the past few months was consummated a short while ago when the Atlantic Refining Company of Philadelphia, formerly one of the largest of the Standard Oil subsidiaries, placed an initial order for six five-ton Stearns heavy duty trucks, which are now being delivered," says J. H. MacAlman, the local dealer.

"This sale, like few other truck sales, was one in which the engineering department of the concern buying the trucks, really decided the matter. It was not so much a question of buying and selling trucks as the ability of the trucks to stand up under the severe and searching tests prescribed by the engineers of the Atlantic company.

"When the Atlantic people decided that the time was ripe for them to solve their transportation problems by using motor trucks, their engineers made a thorough investigation of the twenty duty vehicles manufactured by the leading American motor car builders. After closely investigating the merits of practically all heavy duty trucks on the market, the engineers narrowed the list of manufacturers to be considered to five, and proceeded to subject the trucks made by these manufacturers to a series of exhaustive tests which took in the questions of power, stability, long life, economy, speed, ability for open country, life mileage, ability to handle overloads, and a great many other points.

"Close investigation was made of each of these points, and after a series of thorough tests the engineering department of the Atlantic Refining Company reported that "as a result of their investigation they recommended the adoption of the Stearns product."

C. B. Ring, for a number of years New England representative of the Durant-Dort Carriage Company, has assumed the sales end of the light delivery wagons the Durant-Dort Company is producing.

They are a 600 pound, four-cylinder light delivery wagon with ending-gear transmission that is compactly and strongly built, and in the New England territory Mr. Ring is ready seller. They also have a friction-drive power wagon of the thousand-pound capacity, that Mr. Ring is also handling-field, but was in Boston to close an agency and prepare for the Boston trade, above.

An additional honor has been conferred upon Salesmanager E. H. Benson of the Studebaker corporation by his appointment as vice-president of the Studebaker Corporation of America.

* * *

Benjamin R. Tillson, assistant manager of the Boston Y. M. C. A. automobile school, who has been confined to his home by illness, is able to be out again. The Wednesday evening lectures at the school, which are given by Boston and suburban dealers in automobiles, and which have proved so instructive and interesting to the members and public this Winter, have been under the charge of Mr. Tillson, and will be continued.

BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, MARCH 1, 1913.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND, DAILY AND SUNDAY

The AMERICAN Is Ready to Prove Its Charges Against the New Haven Monopoly—Does the Committee on Rules Want to Reveal or to Conceal the Truth?

The Boston AMERICAN has made certain charges against the New Haven monopoly, which it has OFFERED TO PROVE.

These charges are SERIOUS IN CHARACTER and relate to a matter which gravely AFFECTS THE WELFARE OF THIS COMMONWEALTH.

The AMERICAN accuses the New Haven monopoly of having UNLAWFULLY CONTRIBUTED LARGE SUMS OF MONEY TO PROMOTE LEGISLATION in this Commonwealth.

The AMERICAN charges that the New Haven monopoly has contributed large sums of money to the Hill Towns Transit Association, and to the lobby affecting the legislative committees to which was referred the question of PERMITTING THE NEW HAVEN MONOPOLY TO GRAB THE STREET RAILWAYS in more than half the area of Massachusetts last year.

This Hill Towns Transit Association pretended to represent the SPONTANEOUS demands of the inhabitants of the Hill Towns for this extension of the New Haven Railroad monopoly.

The AMERICAN has asked for an INVESTIGATION of these charges, which it offers to prove in due course of law. Representative John G. Stevens of Marblehead has introduced a resolution calling for a legislative investigation. The Legislature cannot consider the resolution until it has been favorably acted upon by the Committee on Rules.

The Committee on Rules has delegated to Senator Blanchard of Somerville the duty of determining whether or not there is sufficient ground for this investigation.

WHY DOES THE COMMITTEE ON RULES PALTER WITH THIS RESOLUTION?

The situation is simple. A responsible newspaper, having the largest circulation in New England, makes certain SERIOUS CHARGES, WHICH IT OFFERS TO PROVE.

The AMERICAN does not propose to give its case to the unofficial Mr. Blanchard. We do not assume that Mr. Blanchard would carry it to the officials of the New Haven monopoly and thus enable that organization to prepare its defence. Nor do we assume that any member of the Committee on Rules would be guilty of such an act. But men are careless and it is not necessary to take a chance.

When the AMERICAN undertakes to PROVE THESE SERIOUS charges, it proposes to do so according to the established processes of proof in this country. In the most petty ten-dollar case both parties have a right to examine witnesses under oath and to call for the production of books and papers.

When the Legislature gives the AMERICAN the OPPORTUNITY TO EXAMINE WITNESSES UNDER OATH, PARTICULARLY PRESIDENT CHARLES S. MELLEN and VICE-PRESIDENT STORRS and VICE-PRESIDENT BYRNES, and to summon such books and papers as may contain evidence to support the charges, THEN the AMERICAN will PROVE ITS CASE against the New Haven Railroad monopoly.

In the meantime, the AMERICAN ventures the assertion that every SOPHISTICATED member of the Committee on Rules believes that these charges are true.

Furthermore, if the AMERICAN were to make a shrewd guess, it would say that the representatives of the New Haven monopoly have already secretly confessed the truth of these charges to some of its friends in the Legislature, and that THIS is the reason why the leaders of the Committee on Rules are so loath to order an investigation.

But the AMERICAN cannot prove THIS and therefore does not assert it.

DOES THE COMMITTEE ON RULES WANT TO REVEAL OR TO CONCEAL THE TRUTH?

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

PRAISES CARTOON IN AMERICAN

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—The cartoon printed in your issue of February 26 in regard to the seven-dollar-a-week girl was something ghastly to look at, something ghastly to think about. Print it again, in the name of goodness, and let it be taken up by the readers of the Boston AMERICAN and sent to every clergyman, professor, merchant, labor leader, politician and reformer in Boston and suburbs. That cartoon placed before the public a truth, a horror, a crime, an industrial cancer, an insult and a disgrace to the American flag! I am no Episcopalian in religion, and a Socialist in politics, two good combinations, but somehow the sound of the church bells seem harsh, the prayer, the chant, the hymn, seem out of tune! But we must not let this shame on the employer's door-step to compel a higher wage would work hardship on the employer, who in turn would work a hardship on the purchaser. And so the hardships would go on from day to day, with strife, malice, hatred, bitterness, and distress throughout our land. Put the blame where it belongs—on our present system of political government.

WOMEN AND CHILD TRAINING

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—If Ella Wheeler Wilcox thought to advance the cause of woman's suffrage in her editorial of February 19, I fear she used a weak argument.

In proving that women are unfit to bring up children she is robbing them of their last defence.

It has been long admitted that men excel in two of women's domains, i. e., cooking and dressmaking. She now turns over to them the last remaining special occupation—the rearing of children.

She says "science could do it better." The science of which she speaks must be hers made, since she has eliminated mothers, and they constitute by far the larger majority of the sex.

It seems to me, in the light of her remarks, that, instead of aspiring to man's work, women would do better trying to fit women for their own work.

If they wanted a large field they might organize for the purpose of giving women a better training in being good mothers.

Perhaps, then, these mothers might rear a nation of men who would make the laws that would satisfy them and leave them still time to rear their daughters to be equally wise mothers.

Who knows?

SUGGESTS FUND FOR ROSSA

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Will you allow me space enough to say that the Irish people of New England should do something to show that grand old man, O'Donovan Rossa, that they appreciate what he has done for the cause of liberty?

According to the reports in the press he has come to his last days, and is not only feeble but in poverty. This should not be. So far as money is concerned, I feel that many would contribute if only some leading organization, or paper, would start a subscription. Yours respectfully,

J. H. FINN.

The Fallen Star

In two or three weeks the big league baseball managers begin to send home their useless material. Many a star from a sawmill town returns home to tell the folks that "them baseball managers don't know shucks," and that "they'll be sorry yet for overlooking Silas Sweetpea, pitcher for the Red Oaks of Gastown."

In Giving Use Your Own Money Instead of Blackmailing Somebody Into Giving for You

Do Not Build Up a Reputation for Charity by Making Every One You Know Buy Tickets for Entertainments They Abhor—If You Want a Home for Cats, or to Develop Genius, Do It Yourself—Ticket Blackmailing Should Be Stopped.

By DOROTHY DIX

LADIES!

Ladies—kind, gentle, generous, sympathetic ladies—please do your own charity.

When you give, give your own money instead of blackmailing somebody else into giving for you.

If you desire to help the poor and needy, put your hand into your own pocketbook, in place of dipping it into other people's.

Don't do good by proxy and try to climb into Heaven on other people's shoulders.

This warning holds good all the year around, but is especially to be regarded just now during the Lenten season, which is preeminently the season of pious graft, when your women friends and acquaintances and ladies you never heard of, hold you up in the name of charity and make you give, in order that they may achieve a reputation for philanthropy that they don't deserve.

Every mail comes to us laden down with tickets for the benefit of some cause or person that we don't care a rap for, and we are invited to pay out our hard-earned money for those tickets that some woman may see her name figure among the list of patronesses, or have her lop-sided conscience soothed by the thought that she is doing good, when she is really guilty of highway robbery.

Every Lent sees the same old game of extortion played.

Is a woman interested in a Home for Superannuated Cats? Very well. Let her support it. But she doesn't. Instead, she gets up a bazaar, an sends out tickets for it to all the unfortunate people she knows with a request that they buy these tickets, and thus come across with the money to purchase catnip for her hobby and enable her to swell around as the president of a humane society.

Does a woman know some long-haired youth who desires to go to Paris and disport himself in the Latin quarter while he studies art? Forthwith she sets about supplying the money with which to send him abroad, but it never occurs to her to do without a motor for a year or make any other sacrifice herself and give him the money she would thus save. No, indeed. She simply sends out tickets to an exhibition of his work and makes other people put up the long green, while she poses as a Patron of Genius.

Does a woman know a needy gentlewoman who has taken to giving dialect readings or delivering dry-as-dust lectures on something she digs out of the encyclopedia or who strums a little on the piano or sings in an ingrowing voice? She doesn't hand her out a check for the price of a new dress. She says, "I just got up a recital for you," and she sends out tickets and makes her friends pay $2 or $3 for the privilege of being bored to extinction while she lauds herself as a Protector of the Poor.

Of course, it's easy to say that one should have enough moral courage to refuse to be held up by these highwaymen methods of extortion. It is also true that every one of us in moderate circumstances have more poor kin, and personally know more needy people than we can possibly help, and that what we give we prefer to bestow on some shivering old woman or hungry child, instead of buying tickets for a vague cause.

So it would seem simple enough to turn down these importunate demands for money as they deserve, but as a matter of fact it is dangerous and a difficult proceeding. For these gentle panhandlers, who have taken this means of forcing you to part with money you can't afford, are only too often your dearest friends, or women to whom you are under some sort of social obligation and whom you don't wish to offend.

This is where the woman who does good by proxy plays it lowest down, for she trades upon her social position or her husband's power and uses it like a gun that she holds at the heads of people to make them stand and deliver.

She sends her miserable tickets to her tailor and green grocer and butcher and baker, and they dare not refuse to buy, although their wives have to do without a new Easter dress to help along the Superannuated Cats.

She sends her tickets to the poor young married woman, who has been saving up to buy a new rug, and the poor young married woman, with tears and bitterness, buys the tickets, instead of the rug, because the would-be philanthropist is her neighbor and friend, and she hasn't the courage to refuse.

Perhaps, dear, kind, generous sympathetic ladies, you have never thought of what a blackhand method of collecting money it is to force your friends and acquaintances to do your charity for you by means of terrorizing them into giving with these baleful tickets for benefits.

If you haven't, just have a heart-to-heart session with yourself now, and see what a mean, stingy disposition you have got and determine to reform. If you are interested in any charity, give to it yourself. Don't make other people give. If you want to help anybody, open your own money purse, instead of trying to nip them somebody else's. And if you are too much of a tightwad to give at all, at least be generous enough to refrain from sending other people dunning notices that you expect them to give.

The ticket blackmailing should be stopped, and the woman who desires to pose as a philanthropist should be forced to spend her own money on buying her own halo.

Public Speaking—Men Use Their Voices Better Than Women—Speakers Should Train Themselves—Speeches and Many Sermons Should Be Cut Down—Conciseness Adds Power to Words

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner

WE must not force events, but rather make
The heart soil ready for their coming, as
The earth spreads carpets for the feet of Spring,
Or, with the strengthening tone of the frost,
Prepares for Winter. Should a July noon
Burst suddenly upon a frozen world
Small joy would follow, even tho' that world
Were longing for the Summer. Should the sting
Of sharp December pierce the heart of June,
What death and devastation would ensue!
All things are planned! The most majestic sphere
That whirls through space is governed and controlled
By supreme law, as is the blade of grass
Which through the bursting bosom of the earth
Creeps up to kiss the light. Poor puny man
Alone doth strive and battle with the Force
Which rules all lives and worlds, and he alone
Demands effect before producing cause.
How vain the hope! We cannot harvest joy
Until we sow the seed, and God alone
Knows when that seed has ripened. Oft we stand
And watch the ground with anxious brooding eyes,
Complaining of the slow, unfruitful yield,
Not knowing that the shadow of ourselves
Keeps off the sunlight and delays result.
Sometimes our fierce impatience of desire
Doth, like a sultry May, force tender shoots
To ripen prematurely, and we reap
But disappointment; or we rot the germs
With briny tears ere they have time to grow.
While stars are born and mighty planets die
And hissing comets scorch the brow of space
The Universe keeps its eternal calm.
Through patient preparation, year on year,
The earth endures the Travail of the Spring
And Winter's desolation. So our souls,
In grand submission to a higher law,
Should move serene through all the ills of life,
Believing them masked joys.

NOW that women have gone into every possible public place which is open to them, now that they are permitted free speech in every church and on every rostrum in the land (despite the objection of St. Paul), it should occur to them that some preparation is necessary; some greater preparation than a mere desire to talk, or a longing to be ranked among the world's teachers.

No man or woman has a right to rise in an audience and bore a hundred people by rambling, banal talk given in a half inarticulate voice.

Yet one hears this sort of thing everywhere; at every club; at every dinner, where speeches follow the repast; and in too many pulpits. Men usually know how to use their voices better than women in a public place; but they do not seem to be any better prepared with interesting remarks when called upon suddenly to speak. One who ever speaks in public owes it to his fellow men to be always prepared with a few concise, clearly uttered words to offer on short notice.

If he is not confident that he can do this, he should quietly and firmly insist upon being excused.

Voice placing and developing should be rigorously studied by every man and woman who speaks in public.

It is as inexcusable to talk to audiences with a disagreeable or faint voice as it would be to sing in such a voice.

Most Speakers Think Only of Being Seen and Heard

And then unselfishness and consideration of others should be used by every public speaker. They are not used by one in fifty.

A perfect mania for being heard and seen takes possession of the average public speaker. And every other feeling is lost in that one.

There is no anguish much more poignant than that which proceeds from being hemmed in by a concourse of people in a public hall or place of worship, or at a dinner table, and compelled to listen to a dull speech of interminable length, delivered in a weak or unpleasant voice.

And even an agreeable voice, belonging to a man or woman possessed of good ideas, can become irksome, if brevity, the soul of all wisdom as well as wit, be not its chief merit in expression.

There is no truth, no philosophy, no religion, no experience, no knowledge which is not more telling in effect upon a listener if told quickly, concisely and in a brief space of time.

Most Clergymen Would Do Well to Boil Down Their Sermons

There is not one clergyman in a thousand but could make a deeper and better impression on his hearers if he boiled down his sermon to half its original length; and the same can be said of every public speaker.

If you ever talk to audiences of any kind, whether on religion, travel, politics, charity, science or any other topic, take these words home and ask yourself if you are spoiling your best chance of popularity by being too verbose and by not having given proper training to your voice.

And the next time you are called upon to speak, do not occupy ten minutes by telling your listeners that you are not prepared as to saying a dozen banal and uninteresting things; just ask to be excused, and let some one else, who IS prepared, talk.

And if you feel you have something to say, cut your sentences into as few brief concise phrases as you can, and utter them distinctly, and then sit down. The applause which follows such a proceeding will be genuine, not the senseless clatter clapping which so many people give without any meaning, unless it be of relief, when a bore has finished talking.

For that is what a great deal of applause means.
